Three roverlatory, roasting and refining furnaces, of the best character, are being vigorously erected, one of which is completed; the whole of those furnaces are all substantially enclosed and covered with corrugated iron.
A blacksmith's shop and complete plant furnished.
Copper ores from the burrows are being rapidly dressed for smelting, consisting of green and blue carbonates, and red and gray oxides.
About 200 tons upon the surface are undergoing the process of dressing for the furnaces. Samples of those ores, and samples of dressed ore for the inspection of shareholders, at the office of the Company, 302, George-street.
A whim to the main shaft is nearly finished.
This Company has a lease for 84 years of 1700 acres, and the copper is traced a mile on the Company's property.
At the point of the main shaft an immense outcrop of copper formation appears, about 50 feet high by 200 feet wide.
1700 loads of firewood cut, stacked, and in course of delivery to the furnaces.
Firewood abounds.
Limestone in any quantity.
A selection of 40 acres, containing fireclay of a good quality adjacent to the mine is secured.

EXTRACT from the Builder of the Furnaces, dated the 31st December, 1872.

I intend putting fire in to heat the furnace to-morrow, therefore I will decline to smelt the bottom until your arrival, so that you will see the whole process from first to last.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

HOLTERMANN'S INTERCOLONIAL EXPOSITION of the AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.
Embracing Exhibits in the five following distinct sections:—
Section 1.—A series of PHOTOGRAPHIC Views of every town in the colony, showing the principal streets, public buildings, &c. These views will be Glass Transparencies, enlarged from the original pictures, and vividly coloured. There will also be albums of each town, containing statistical information and other valuable letter-press matter. This series will also embrace the most notable mining localities in the country.
Section 2.—This department will contain a unique collection of MINERALS—Gold, Copper, Tin, Iron, Coal, Bituminous Shale, Precious Stones, and curious specimens of the country's geological formation. The greatest care will be paid to the arrangement and classification of these specimens.
Section 3.—The AGRICULTURAL progress of the colony will be indicated by exhibits of Cereals from different districts, together with samples of Australian-produced Sugar, Tobacco, Wine, Cotton, and Silk. There will also be models of fruits, made natural size. The Flora of Australia generally will be represented by a large collection of wax models.
Section 4.—This department will contain models of the best Machinery used at the principal gold-fields and quartz reefs of the colony, and showing the working. Also, models of gold-saving appliances.
Section 5.—The FAUNA of the country will be indicated by stuffed specimens of its native birds, quadrupeds, &c., the whole arranged so as to make them practically valuable to the student of Natural History.
The undersigned, in directing public attention to the above outline of a projected display of the country's industrial resources, cannot lose the opportunity of tracing testimony to the liberal spirit in which Mr. Holtermann has entered into this undertaking. Having observed with regret the apathy that exists in drawing European attention to the products of the colonies—more especially to their vast mineral wealth—he has, with generosity that deserves unqualified praise, come himself to the rescue, and the Exposition announced above will be the result of his enlightened zeal. In making this announcement, it is to be distinctly understood that, as outlines just given, no feature of the Exhibition has been exaggerated. The main object of the undertaking being to demonstrate the vast Mineral resources of the Australian colonies, it is intended, when really good specimens are brought together, to exhibit them (with good samples of other Australian products) in the principal cities of Europe, and thus show what a vast field for industrial effort these northern lands open to an energetic class of immigrants. In an undertaking of this kind—one which is essentially of a national character—and from the magnitude of the work surrounding it, it must be obvious that no individual, however zealous and self-sacrificing he may be, can unassisted make it a complete success. It is, therefore, gratifyingly hoped that all public men, and bodies corporate will render in its behalf whatever assistance they can. It is in their power to make it one of the most intelligible displays of the country's wealth that can possibly be made.
The New South Wales Branch will be open in about eight months from the present date. Communications in reference to it are requested to be addressed to Mr. HOLTERMANN, North Shore, Sydney. Special photographic views are now being taken all over the colony for the transparencies of the First Section of the Exposition.

NOBEL'S GIANT BLASTING POWDER, or DYNAMITE.
...ERS, MINING MANAGERS, and DIRECTORS OF MINES.
...E TIME! SAVE LABOUR! SAVE CANDLES! ...AVE STEEL! SAVE HAMMERS! and SAVE MONEY BY USING THE GIANT POWDER.

It saves life and accidents, as it is tamped with water. It saves all the risk of boring out missed holes. It saves time, as it strikes downwards as well as upwards and crushes the rock much more than any other explosive. It saves labour, as one man with a 7-inch drill and a 7-lb. hammer could do as much as two men with larger drills. It saves half the candles. It saves steel and hammers, as only about half the amount of steel is required to drill the holes, and the small pieces do not wear out or get broken as much as the larger hammers. It saves half the expense of sharpening drills. It saves rents on Government leases, as a mine can be worked out in half the time.

MEDICAL, CHEMICALS, ETC.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—TIMES, July 13, 1866.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See LANCET, December 31, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course, it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—MEDICAL TIMES, January 12, 1866.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the best and most certain remedy in coughs, colds, asthma, consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, &c.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is a certain cure in cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, colics, &c.

NOTICE.
MORSON'S EFFECTUAL REMEDIES are sold by Chemists and Druggists throughout the world.
PEPSINE.—The popular and professional medicine for indigestion is MORSON'S PEPSINE, the active principle of the gastric juice. The careful and regular use of this valuable medicine restores the natural functions of the stomach, giving once more strength to the body. In powder, lozenges, globules; and as wine in quarter, half, and one pint bottles.
CHLORODYNE has now obtained such universal celebrity it can scarcely be considered a speciality, its unequaled virtues being known to most European practitioners. Many of the Chloroforms of commerce not being of uniform strength, has induced MORSON and SON to compound their preparation. Sold in half oz., one, and two oz. bottles.
GELATINE.—The purest preparation of this nutritious agent; extract is MORSON'S.

LERAS' LIQUID PHOSPHATE OF IRON.
It contains the constitutive elements of the bones and of the blood, and is the most rational of all chalybeates. It may be prescribed for the most delicate young females, whose development has been retarded; for women suffering from atonic dyspepsia, anæmia; for pale and sickly children, deprived of appetite; and, as the principal action is to restore to impoverished blood the iron in which it is deficient, and to the bones the phosphate that forms their base, it is recommended for debilitated persons, whether their debility proceeds from disease or any other cause. To use is always attended with surprising results.
GRIMAULT and CO.'S
SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITE OF LIME.
An excellent remedy for all affections of the chest. It relieves coughs, effectually prevents nocturnal perspiration, and restores the patient's strength. This syrup is the only one which, ever since 1867, has invariably been attended with satisfactory results, a fact due to the purity of the hypophosphite employed. Be sure to observe that it bears the signature "GRIMAULT and CO."
The effect of the Syrup of Hypophosphite of Lime is increased by the Pectoral Lozenges of Lactucarium and Cherry Laurel, prepared by Grimault and Co.
The delicious scents, containing the most soothing substances of all the Materia Medica, are employed with success against coughs, influenza, bronchitis, hooping cough, &c.
GRIMAULT and CO.'S
IODIZED SYRUP OF HORSE-RADISH.
Considered the best substitute for Cod Liver Oil. It has been successtried, by experiments made in the principal hospitals of Paris, that this syrup has always produced results superior to those obtained from the above-mentioned oil, which patients find so disagreeable to take.
Not a single instance can be adduced in which pale, lymphatic children, subject to swelling of the glands, to affection of the skin, of the head, or of the face, or other inconveniences of a weak constitution, who have taken this syrup without deriving signal benefit from its use.
GRIMAULT and CO.'S
PEPSINE DIGESTIVE POWDERS, ELIXIR, and WINE.
Pepsine is one of the most recent scientific discoveries in therapeutics. Acting chiefly on the organs of digestion, it possesses the property of digesting by its own innate virtues. It removes all the inconveniences of the difficult digestion, and cures prevents nausea.
The researches on Pepsine made at the College of France by Dr. Lecorte, in conjunction with Professor Claude Bernard, must secure the preference for our preparation of Pepsine.
ASTHMA. ASTHMA.
GRIMAULT and CO.'S
INDIAN CIGARETTES OF CANNABIS INDICA.
All the means hitherto employed to relieve Asthma have been only palliatives in varied forms based on belladonna, stramonium, nitrates, or opium. Recent experiments made in the Paris hospitals have proved that our Cigarettes, made of the extract of Indian Hemp, possess remarkable virtues against this complaint, as well as against nervous coughs, chronic laryngitis, hoarseness, loss of voice, partial neuralgia, and insomnia.
GRIMAULT and CO.'S GUARANA.
A single powder of this vegetable production is sufficient to cure instantly the most violent sick headache. It is the most valuable remedy against diarrhœa, dysentery, and all disorders proceeding from derangement of the stomach or bowels. This powder is indispensable for all families, and for more efficacious than opium and sub-nitrate of bismuth.
INTERNAL OR LOCAL NEW CURATIVE AGENT,
GRIMAULT and CO.'S MATICO.
This new remedy is prepared from the leaves of a Peruvian Pepper Shrub called Matico, and cures promptly and infallibly, without any fear of inflammatory results.
The great majority of physicians in Paris—especially Dr. Ricord—Russia, Germany, and New York, now use no other remedy.
Full directions accompany each bottle and packet.

This preparation has now been before the Australian public for upwards of sixteen years, and from its first introduction to the present time the demand for it has been steadily increasing.
The large sale that it commands, and the eulogies which the proprietor frequently receives, incontestably prove the high estimation in which it is held. It possesses the combined advantages of a dandriff lotion and a nutritive cream. It effectually cleanses as well as strengthens the hair.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT COLAC.—We Lost.—The Argus reports that on Saturday afternoon, at mid-day, during a squall, three school boys, Macafee and two brothers Smylie, who were in a flat-bottomed boat on lake Colac, were upset a mile from the shore. The Smylies, who were good swimmers, placed Macafee on the boat, themselves, and tried to push the boat ashore. They were 300 yards of the shore, when they became tired, let go the boat, and sank. Macafee was rescued in exhausted condition. A search was made for the bodies, but they have not yet been found.

DEPRAVITY.—The Gulgong correspondent of the Mudgee Times states that a frightful cruelty was the subject of an investigation on the 24th December, in the Police Court. A man named O'Brien, committed an assault upon a little girl. Although the mother of the child knew of the outrage, she made no complaint. Constable Duffy hard of the affair, and in most praiseworthy manner arrested the man, and found him hiding in an old hole. Rule. Duffy brought the wretch into Court. He was brought before the Commissioner and fined £5. He was committed for trial at the next Mudgee Court.

THE INTERCOLONIAL CRICKET MATCH.—VICTORIA V. THE COMBINED COLONIES.

(Condensed from the Argus.)

This match was commenced on Boxing-day, under very favourable circumstances, and continued during the two following days. For a long time the public have been accustomed to an annual contest between Victoria and New South Wales, varied occasionally by a match between Victoria and Tasmania; and they have at times seemed almost weary of it. The players of colonies became familiar to each other, and there was a monotonous sameness in the results. On the present occasion the public were provided with a good Christmas entertainment. Novelty was introduced into the conditions, and no one could venture to make certain of the issue. Eleven of Victoria—an eleven which the match committee had considerable difficulty in selecting, from the large number of the eligible candidates presented to their choice—met thirteen who represented New South Wales, Tasmania, and South Australia—three colonies where cricket is constantly played. The attendance when the game commenced was about 1500, and about 4000 in the afternoon, which showed the public interest in the game. The weather was mild for the season of the year. The impression prevailed in some minds that 13 players from three colonies were scarcely as formidable antagonists for the Victorian men as 13 from one colony—from New South Wales, for instance. The combined team had the advantage of numbers, but the men hardly knew one another, and did not therefore form a compact body. But two of the Tasmanian men on the first day rendered good service as bowlers, when several of the New South Wales men failed, and one of them, the only one who had the opportunity, showed himself to be a useful batsman. The toss was won by E. Gregory, captain of the combined team, who gave the Victorian eleven the first chance at the wickets, partly because he did not think it the best for them, and partly because he wished his own men to play together in the field before they went out in couples to bat. The thirteen were in the field punctually at noon. Gibson and Campbell, the two appointed to make a beginning for Victoria, followed them a few minutes later. The umpires, Mr. George Curtis for the thirteen, and Mr. John Smith for the eleven, then took up their stations, and the field was placed out as follows:—Coates, bowler; Hewitt, wicket-keeper; Tecce, point; Thompson, short-slip; Hogg, long-slip; Barnes, long-stop; D. Gregory, mid-off; King, mid-on (deep); Arthur, draw; Gooden, short-leg; E. Gregory, long-off; Bannermann, cover; and Morcom, long-leg. The determination of the umpire for the combined team to allow nothing but fair bowling very soon manifested itself. He no-balled Gregory so often that he was taken off, and not tried again during the innings. Gibson was the first to go out for two. This was a good beginning for the visitors, for Gibson was supposed to be in particularly good form, and he had shaped well with the axe handle, which in practice, he usually substitutes for a bat. At half-past 1 o'clock, the players were entertained by the M.C.C. No time was wasted on toasts, but Mr. Croaker, the vice-president, availed himself of the opportunity to mention that the president (Mr. M'Arthur), whose absence was apologised for, intended to present the top scorer with a prize bat made out of a willow tree on his own private estate. The play, if it had been stayed before lunch, was still more so for some time after it. Maiden followed maiden; the defence was masterly, but the bowling straight to be hit about. Runs were got in singles at intervals. There was a marked contrast between the simple delivery of Nat. Thompson and the cumbersome manner of Hogg, who always ended his run up to the crease with a hitch and a swing. The innings closed at 20 minutes past 5 o'clock, for 136 runs. The total number of balls delivered was 518, and no less than eight bowlers were tried; Coates, Hogg, and Barnes, were the three who most distinguished themselves. The fielding was very fair, and not one chance which could be considered at all easy was missed; but the feat of the innings was the stumping of Conway by Hewitt. The Victorian eleven took the field at 25 minutes to 6, and as the agreement was to draw the stumps at 6 there was not time for the combined team to do much. Cosstick bowled, Gibson was at the wicket, Kelly point, Conway slip, Campbell longstop, Cooper short-leg, M'Gan mid-off, Gaggin mid-on, Hepburn cover, Boyle leg, and Willis directed operations from the position of third man. D. Gregory and Arthur were the first representatives of the combined team. When the stumps were drawn the combined team had one wicket down for 28. The spectators on the second day (Friday) were numerous, that is to say, not many short of 2000. To see so many at a cricket match on the day which comes between a whole holiday and a half-holiday was something unusual, and the attendance bore witness to the fact that the public really like the game when the competitors are able, and the play even. A large score was expected from the combined team, not merely because they had begun hopefully, but because the eleven were not particularly strong in bowlers, and might be at the mercy of the thirteen, if some of their steady batsmen had knocked one or more of them off. But it turned out that none of the batsmen could be steady, their play was characterised by too much hurry. They wanted to lose no time in getting runs, and in their "haste to be rich" they lost something of considerably more value than the runs which they risked not a little to obtain. The spectator noticed a striking difference between the style of the best Victorian men and the best of the combined team. The Victorians played with great patience, they waited for the runs to come, and devoted themselves to the destruction of the bowling. The combined team scored at the rate of two runs to the over, the Victorians at the rate of 1, and the consequence was, not that the visitors obtained the largest number of runs, but that they had to bowl more than twice as many overs as the Victorians, and to spend more than twice the time in the field. When the thirteen were disposed of for 113, or 23 less than the eleven scored, the odds were said to be 3 to 1 on Victoria, but at the close of the day's play the game seemed to be as near even as it well could be, for six of the Victorians were out in their second innings for 69. Cosstick was still top scorer among the Victorians. They were just an hour and ten minutes making 58 runs. An adjournment then took place for lunch. Barnes, of Tasmania, was the successor of Hewitt, and there was some speculation as to whether the score would be carried up to 100. Certainly much was not expected of Barnes, for an indefatigable member of the M.C.C., whose book on the match was the theme of general remark, had laid 20 to 1 that the aggregate runs of the three Tasmanians, if counted as the runs of one man, would not amount to top score. The last ball went in to Hogg's wicket—all out for 113. Barnes carried out his bat for 20 runs, obtained by free hitting. Cosstick bowled with great success; they scored most of the runs off him, but he took nine wickets out of 12. The innings closed at five minutes to 3 o'clock. The combined team took the field at twenty-five minutes past 3. There was a slightly different arrangement of the men. Gooden, who had effected a good catch at short-leg in the first innings, was shifted to point, where several catches were missed; Arthur was made long-stop; D. Gregory was sent to long-leg and cover. The extra men were stationed at draw and long-off. The sanguine admirers of the Victorian eleven said that they were going to get 200 runs. Gibson batted with remarkable patience, and was at the wickets two hours and a half, when Coates bowled him with the first ball of his 35th over. When the stumps were drawn the Victorian eleven had six wickets down, with 69 runs. The match ended on Saturday in a victory for the representatives of New South Wales, Tasmania, and South Australia; and there can be little doubt that the best men won. The thirteen managed, in the second innings, to do what on Friday was thought they would have done in the first—they broke down the bowling. The eleven were not strong in bowlers; and when they had to take Cosstick off, no fit substitute could be found. This was the first occasion, perhaps, on which Willis failed to make his presence felt. When Mr. Curtis, at the commencement of the game, no-balled D. Gregory, it was obvious that Willis would be no-balled too. There was no special need for the services of Willis on Thursday or Friday, but on Saturday, when they were really wanted, he dare not attempt to bowl with freedom. He went on to deliver round-arm slows. Mr. Curtis stepped back a few paces to watch him closely. Willis moved his arm forward as delicately as if it had been recently treated for a fracture, and the splints just removed. The batsmen punished the first over. Two good men were set, and one scoring fast; the thirteen needed about 45 to win, and had eight wickets to fall. Willis found it necessary therefore to bowl less simply in the second over, and the umpire twice called "no ball." Cosstick came on again, but a fresh bowler was required at the other end. M'Gan was called upon, but he was not in practice, and he pitched the ball absurdly short. It became evident from that moment that the game was up. The 45 runs were made with the loss of three out of the eight wickets. The match was chiefly won by the steady batting of Arthur, of Tasmania, who rendered as efficient service in his department as the bowlers Hogg and Barnes did in theirs. The statement was circulated, on excellent authority, that Arthur, in the second over which he received from Boyle, allowed a straight ball to touch his pad before he played it with his bat, and must have been given out if Boyle had appealed to the umpire (Mr. Curtis); but no one appealed, and Arthur made 34 runs by the very best of play. The example of the Victorian men had not been lost on him. He saw that the proper game was patience and not hurry, and the runs he waited for came in due course. The silver cup of the M.C.C. was carried off by E. Gregory, of Sydney, who got 1 more run than Arthur. The public were furnished with a display of excellent cricket in this match; the play was very interesting at the last, but to many persons looked on from the outside of the ground to render the speculation a very profitable one to the person who was so enterprising as to bring it off. The attendance on Saturday, within the gates, was scarcely 2000, and the number of ladies in the reserves was again remarkably few. Perhaps the weather kept the fair patrons of the game away, for there was a strong north wind, and clouds of dust from Wellington-parade were blown across the ground. The combined team commenced their second innings at twenty-five minutes past 2 o'clock. They had to make 113 runs, the score of the first innings, to win, and the general opinion was that they would do it. At the same time no [illegible] venture to lay odds upon them. They eventually [illegible] by five wickets. Thus ended the first effort on [illegible] of an eleven of Victoria to play thirteen eleven [illegible] the three neighbouring colonies. There were [illegible] instances of smart fielding on the part of the eleven [illegible] inns just concluded, but as a whole, they fielded [illegible] fly, and, from slowness in their movements, [illegible] 20 many runs to be stolen. The long-stopping [illegible] Campbell deserves to be considered by itself, [illegible] exceptionally good. The spectators witnessed [illegible] interesting match, and if they could not admire the [illegible] of the Victorians, or exactly approve of the [illegible] of Wills, they were at any rate gratified with a display [illegible] good batting on the part of the Sydney and Tasmanian men. The sympathies of the spectators were not [illegible] manifested for one side or the other. The players [illegible] umpires, scorers, and some twenty others assembled [illegible] the conclusion of the game, in the luncheon-room, [illegible] invitation of Mr. Croaker, the vice-president of the M.C.C., to drink a few toasts, and witness the presentation [illegible] trophies. Mr. Croaker presented the silver cup of the M.C.C. and Mr. M'Arthur's prize bat to E. Gregory, [illegible] announced, amid the cheers of all present, that Mr. M'Arthur meant to give a similar bat to Mr. Arthur, and that [illegible] combined team would also give him a bat. A purse of [illegible] was presented to Sam Cosstick, who had proved himself to be the best bowler; but Mr. Coates had run him a close second—the average of the one was 8·3 runs per wicket, [illegible] 8·7—that Mr. Croaker said the M.C.C. would [illegible] with a prize ball. Mr. Coates said he did not [illegible] Cosstick the victory, but if the innings had been [illegible] he might have managed to spoil his average. [illegible] Sydney men had been subjected to much revilling in the colony for playing, but no doubt they would be [illegible] brought of now that they had achieved a triumph on Victorian soil. Whatever the New South Wales people might think of the match, the majority would admit that they had good representatives. Mr. Tecce, of the Sydney University, denied the statement that the New South Wales Association refused to recognise the match. The association never was consulted, and all it did was to let it [illegible] that the match was not one of its arranging. [illegible] no objection to the players, but was perfectly satisfied that the best six had been chosen. We end the account of the day's proceedings with the complete score of the match:

It combines the most valuable FLESH AND BLOOD FORMING SUBSTANCES, and differs essentially from other farinaceous foods, which, being quite unable to afford proper nourishment to a growing infant, frequently lead to rickettyness and idiotic conditions. Savory and Moore's preparation has also the advantage of being freed from the ground husk of the corn, which produces irritation of the bowels and intractable diarrhœa. No boiling or straining required. Sold in tins, prepared by Savory and Moore, 143, New Bond-street. Procurable of all chemists, storekeepers, and Italian warehousemen.—ADV.

FIJI.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

DECEMBER 26.

The cry for "annexation" is as loud as ever in Levuka; but neither here nor in such of the country districts as have "spoken" is it annexation that is exactly wanted just now. The Act suspending suits for plantation accounts for a year has just expired, and there is a great objection to the compulsory payment of debts by operation of law. The existence and pressure of the governmental authority is also, in many other respects, distasteful. What has been really asked for, and that in the most emphatic manner, is that the operation of the Constitution and of the Courts may be stayed, and the old state of things reverted to, so that the settlers may "deal with the natives" around them, and "get on as well as they used to do" before they were embarrassed by the presence and action of a Government. The civil officers were met, in one place, by white men and their imported labourers armed, with the British flag at their head borne by a Tanna man. But the Government is determined to sustain its authority. The King and principal chiefs have just been communicated with in reference to this matter, and to the request that he would overturn the Constitution, which he (and many of those who joined in this request) had positively sworn to sustain. The King said, as reported to me by one who heard him—"Well, if they drive us to fight, we can fight. In old days we killed each other like pigs. We gave that up, and now we are likely, it seems, to be shot like fowls. But why that flag? That is not the flag of insolence and violence. They should have made a flag for themselves. Let the Queen know this thing." The King's mind is to "rosota" (i.e. endure), but if the people who are daily outraging law, both human and Divine, go too far, he will cease to endure, and either send some of them out of the country or out of the world. England must support the authority of the "Government de facto" until the working of that Government and the wishes of the nation can be properly and impartially inquired into and ascertained, or there will be bloodshed. And if once the Fijians are driven to force to sustain the authority of their Sovereign and his Government, and their own rights and liberties as a people, it is hard to say where the mischief will end.

President Grant has sent an autograph letter to the King, fully recognising the sovereignty and international rights of the latter.

The deputation which waited upon the Chief Secretary to-day to know the result of his visit to the King at Bau, and the determination of his Majesty as to their request, that he would abrogate the Constitution, were told that their proposition would neither be discussed nor entertained. An alternative, and more sensible proposal, that the Parliament should be summoned for January, instead of waiting until May, its usual time of meeting, was discussed some short time since at a "caucus" of the members then in Levuka, and it was decided not to adopt this course.

In spite of all these under-current ebullitions and threatenings, things are quiet at present; business is pretty brisk; buildings are rising in all quarters; Government notes are taken at par by many of the principal storekeepers; the revenue is rapidly increasing (although hard cash for immediate purposes is short), and there is a great deal of sociality and gaiety. The ball to Mr. and Mrs. Butters was a most excellent affair, and there is to be a "Carnival" at Christmas, and a regatta, &c., to open the New Year.

The Law Courts have been pretty busy. The executors of the late Mr. Sagar have recovered a verdict against Mr. Swanston, the Minister for Native Affairs, for £1198 for the removal of a number of Levini labourers. A number of law points have been reserved which have been argued yesterday and to-day, and on which judgement has been reserved, but it is pretty clear that either the Government or Mr. Swanston—most probably the former—will have to pay the money.

ENGLAND AND THE FIJI LABOUR TRADE.

(From the Fiji Gazette, December 21.)

We notice an article from the Sydney Morning Herald, which involves the grave charge against the Fijian Government of alleged connivance in a case of kidnapping. The tone of the Press shows very plainly the prevailing idea held in the colonies, as to the real cause of any possible interference by England. It is not to protect her subjects, but to look after their misdeeds, as regards kidnapping and other barbarities, that England claims the right of putting a veto on their power to throw off their allegiance. By this step the hands of the Fijian Government will be materially strengthened. Hitherto they have had but her moral support; now England will insist on her subjects being held liable for those misdeeds which the Fijian Parliament last session did its utmost—by stringent legislation—to suppress. A year ago Lord Kimberley's despatch might have been read with a double meaning; but now that he has practically sanctioned the acts of those who assisted to form a Government here, there is but one inference to be drawn from it, namely, that if the Fijian Government either do not or cannot punish British subjects for offences against "The Kidnapping Act of 1872," or for other crimes, the avenging hand of a man-of-war will do it for them.

We believe the power—as without doubt the will—exists in Fiji to check these malpractices. If not, we gladly hail the prospect of a flag which we all revere being engaged in assisting it in the task. That Fiji should look after vessels cruising hundreds of miles away is an impossibility; and a few English cruisers will do that well and effectually. But that Fiji should see that none but willing emigrants land on her shores—that employers, British or otherwise, treat their labourers with justice and humanity, and that the terms of their agreement are strictly adhered to is a duty which the Government owe as much to themselves as to the civilized world. That in many instances such supervision is almost needless we are glad to admit, but men of an inferior race like foreign labourers here can never be safely delivered over to the arbitrary will of any master. For their welfare and due interests the State is responsible, and it must exercise that control for which the recently passed Acts of the Legislature provide. We regret that there are men disposed to dispute even this right; but they may rest assured that it is one which the Government will strictly uphold, and in upholding it they will obtain the sanction of any Power whose subjects may render themselves liable to prosecution.

A FATAL FIGHT IN TASMANIA.—The Launceston Examiner of the 24th instant reports that on the Sunday previous the sad and startling intelligence reached town that Thomas Lindsay Field, eldest son of Mr. T. W. Field, had died about 11 o'clock that morning from the effects of injuries received the preceding afternoon at the hands of Seton Williams, a young man aged 18, son of the Rev. Montagu Williams, of Westbury. The following is a précis of the sad affair:—For some months past ill-feeling had existed between the deceased and Williams, and in July last deceased sent a letter to Williams, asking him if it were true that he (Williams) had threatened to punch his (Field's) head, and challenging him to come out some afternoon and have the fight out, after which they might shake hands and be friends, and saying that he was quite willing to take Williams and his brother "one up and one down." To this letter Williams replied that he was quite able to defend himself if occasion should require, but Field must know that he would not be guilty of participating in the course proposed to settle the dispute. The matter appears to have been held in abeyance from that time until the late municipal election, during the progress of which the parties met in O'Meara's Inn, Westbury, where Field struck Williams in the face. A blow or two on either side was then given, after which they parted. Nothing more is heard of the dispute till Saturday, when it was generally known among their immediate acquaintances that a fight was coming off that afternoon. In the afternoon Field, accompanied by his cousin Charles Field, went down to the Cricket-ground, where they met Williams. All then proceeded to the Swamp. Williams was accompanied by another young man named Charles Watson, who acted as second to him, Charles Field performing a like office for his unfortunate cousin, and there were about 40 others present. It seems the fight lasted two hours and a half, and until the last half-hour no serious damage was done to either of the combatants; indeed, one of the witnesses said that, from their evident inexperience at fighting, they were unable to reach each other. During the latter portion of the fight they closed a few times, and Williams, whose weight now began to tell, used to fall on top of Field. There were three very severe falls, upon the last of which poor Field essayed to get up, but fell back senseless, and remained in that state till 11 o'clock the next morning, when he died—18 hours after the fall. As usual in such cases, the police were not made acquainted with the fight until it had terminated, and they only heard of it then accidentally. Mr. Superintendent Mahoney and constable Walker hastened to the spot, and found Field lying on the ground supported by Watson. Medical assistance was promptly obtained, and Field, not being able to bear removal home, was conveyed to the house of Mr. Superintendent Mahoney, where he died on Sunday morning. The medical testimony given by Drs. Rock and M'Creery proved that death had been caused by concussion of the brain, exhaustion, and effusion of blood on the brain, combined. The verdict of the jury was "that Thomas Lindsay Field died on the 22nd day of December, 1872, at Westbury, from the effects of injuries received at the hands of Seton Williams on Saturday, the 21st day of December, arising from a pugilistic encounter. We further [illegible] that Seton Williams is guilty of manslaughter." Williams was [illegible] taken into custody on a charge of [illegible] Miller applied for bail, but the [illegible] bail, as although the English law [illegible] be bail in a case like the present, [illegible] granted by the colonial law. From the [illegible] of the district, and great sympathy is felt for the [illegible] principal actors in this fearful tragedy.

THERE ARE UPWARDS OF 11,600 POLICY-HOLDERS in the AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY, jointly contributing more than £179,000 per annum in premiums, to provide nearly £5,000,000 at their death, or to be paid themselves on attaining a given age. The Society, since its establishment twenty-two years ago, has issued 15,318 policies; paid for claims and purchase of policies £344,422; distributed to members realised profit amounting to £194,352, and has acquired a safely invested accumulated funds, raised entirely from the contributions of the members of £818,000, and a gross annual revenue from premiums and from interest of £224,400. The progressive increase in the Society's business and resources is prominently brought out by comparing the amount of business at the periods of the several Quinquennial investigations, as shown in the following abstract:—

Quinquennial Period ending	No of Policies.	Sum Assured.	Annual Revenue From Premiums.	Annual Revenue From Interest.	Accumulated Funds.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1873.

THE successive telegrams on the affairs of Rome seem to imply an urgent importance in the controversy with the spiritual power carried on by Italy and Germany. The bad relations between Prussia and the Papacy are of recent date. It was the boast of both parties that they had found means of moving smoothly in their different orbits without collision or eclipse. Union of Church and State was once the policy of courts and prelates. The superiority of the spiritual to the secular was often questioned; but still it was admitted that they must occupy the same moral universe, and so react upon each other. In modern times the watchword of reform has been "a free Church in a free State." Within the last few years, however, it has seemed impossible that they could live together. A cry for a divorce has on one side been raised, and on the other has been asserted the exercise of that sovereign coercion which, deriving its power from on high, is entitled to correct the refractory, to punish the contumacious, and whether Kings or States, to demand their submission.

The development of this controversy seems now to have brought it to a pass where a quarrel becomes war. Many have been the appeals made to the nations of Europe. The King of ITALY seized the capital of Rome, and left but a shadow of the temporal power to the Sovereign Pontiff, who has pronounced this an act of robbery, spoliation, and persecution. The POPE has anathematised all but in name the King in whose power he is. He has foretold both to the Emperor of GERMANY and the King of ITALY the signal chastisement which awaits them. He has narrated the fate of those kings and nations which have been persecutors as a warning and a prediction. In a situation where a prophecy may readily become an armed force he has employed many menaces which can only be fulfilled either by fire from heaven or the sword of man. All over Europe the language of the Sovereign Pontiff has been repeated by his subjects, and if a crusade has not been openly preached this has been probably due more to the difficulty of organizing than to any doubt of its lawfulness or its success. In a Syllabus published some years ago one of the opinions condemned as heretical, and the censure has since been confirmed by the Œcumenical Council, is that which would justify non-intervention. But intervention has been invoked in France without circumlocution by multitudes; and the treatment of the Papacy is made a justification of any means by which the persecution said to be inflicted can be prevented. This has been the state of things for some time. As to the Berlin Chancellor, perhaps his master, he has been specially denounced as the persecutor of the Church on whom the judgments of Heaven will fall, unless averted by speedy repentance.

The King of ITALY appears silent under reproaches. Perhaps no reply would avail him. With a people who have shown great indifference to the Papacy it is probably his best and easiest policy. But Prince BISMARK has displayed a more intractable spirit. His seizure of the control of education, his expulsion of the Jesuits, his threat of similar treatment to the Bishops who support them, and his open protection of the old Catholic partyare measures that have been met at Rome with strong censure as violations of the rights of conscience, and threatening the liberties of the Church. Notwithstanding this, Prussia maintained relations with the Roman Court. She had an ambassador sent to the Pontiff, and was therefore necessarily made acquainted with all the public acts of PIUS IX.

It appears that the POPE has within a short time delivered an allocution in the presence of a number of Cardinals. This is a solemn deliverance. It is not to be taken as a random speech expressed at interviews, or a mere form of courtesy, but the deliberate judgment of the infallible teacher of the Church, although of course it may be open to consideration whether the opinions expressed are to be regarded as infallible. In this allocution on the state of the Church such words have been used as amount, in the opinion of Berlin, to gross and scandalous libels. Indeed it is extremely difficult to reconcile the duties of a subject with respectful attention to the Prelate who denounces its Government and its policy, and presents it to the reprobation of mankind. The Concordats and other instruments which stop the publication of a Bull or an Interdict no longer exist. It is therefore possible that under the palace window of the Emperor a public crier may proclaim the opinion of Pope PIUS IX. of his Government, or that a similar attack may strike the Sovereign of Italy. This has led probably to the extreme measure of prohibiting the publication, which is the first formal act of war as against the Papal authority itself.

It is said that these measures have profoundly excited Europe, and produced a feeling of uneasiness which must be inevitable in all those States where the adherents of the Papacy are numerous and powerful. In former times similar measures led to pro serious consequences than a conflict of opinion. They are commonly notes of preparation for another kind of music; but they may be a practical intervention which may avert the danger. M. THIERS is a supporter of the Papacy without believing in its spiritual power. He will probably, therefore, advise the cessation of hostilities as likely to precipitate France into perilous complications. He wishes to remain at the head of the Catholic interest as its protector. This he has expressed clearly; but at the same time repudiated any programme that might commit France to any party in the Church, or to the support of any ecclesiastical doctrines by the sword.

In the meantime it is evident that Pius IX. believes in himself and defies all consequences. Evidently brave old man, he is one of those eminent persons that sometimes ruin a cause they espouse. He remembers that they came fire from heaven at the command of the prophet and to the confusion of his enemies; and that the earth swallowed up those who disputed the authority of MOSES and AARON. The appearance of similar judgments will put an end to all controversy; but it is not likely that those who denied the spiritual power when it is united with the temporal will be armed from their purpose by any but the most terrible evidence that it is criminal and vain.

Are we, however, to say that the conduct of certain States is inconsistent with their solemn professions of former days, that they have not seized power under false pretences, and violated treaties to which they had solemnly sworn? We certainly shall not say so, for the history of the political world has displayed untruthfulness in a degree hardly surpassed in the worst of times.

Some persons fault in the difficulties of the POPE, in the small spirit of a petty sect. It might be as well to consider that there are at least eighty millions of people who are concerned in the conflict, and that a large number of them lament the state of the Papacy, with a severe regret, and even bitter tears. The fall of a great system is attended with considerable suffering, and breaks up many a deeply rooted habit and warmly cherished opinion. It separates families and cities by fierce divisions, and commences an alienation which probably will last for generations, and in this case perhaps will lead to a civil war of a sanguinary and destructive kind. It may be a necessary ill, and an evil surely it is.

ALTHOUGH defeated in his effort in the Assembly to reserve for New South Wales the small but effective Infantry Force that it had secured, Sir JAMES MARTIN is not disposed to let the whole question of the defence of Sydney go to sleep. In his letter to the Herald of the 31st ultimo he points out that applying to our own batteries, mutatis mutandis, the recommendations made by Captain STOKES, R.E., with reference to the defences of Melbourne, all the works ought to be closed in the rear, and each battery should be supplied with a barrack, in order that it may be properly garrisoned by trained artillerymen. Persons who visit these batteries in their present condition, and who criticise them as open to attack from a land party, should remember that they see them only half completed. The Ministry under whom the works were commenced did not stay in office long enough to see them finished. Although batteries ought not to be made questions of party politics they have unfortunately become subject to its vicissitudes, and unfinished works testify to strange the fluctuations of our political life. It is fortunate thing that the same disposition to revise the policy of a preceding Cabinet does not apply to our railways; for it would be very awkward to have to show to distinguished visitors a half-finished zigzag or the piers of a bridge without the girders, and to have to explain that since the work was contracted for there had been a change of Ministry, that the railway policy of the country had been altered, and that the contractors had been compensated for surrendering their bargain.

Sir JAMES MARTIN closes his letter by saying that, though the defence of the metropolis will be unattended to till the enemy is at our doors, the actual presence of a hostile force will inspire us with a necessary warlike "energy." But is this reflection there is no consolation. What is the use of energy when it comes too late? If there is one thing certain, it is that warlike preparations of the modern kind cannot be improvised. Batteries in rock cannot be built in a day. When men fight at fisticuffs they are soon equipped for the battle, but in proportion as the weapons of warfare become more scientific, the need of preparation is the greater. Let it be remembered that any attack made upon the city would be made with very little notice, and would give us very little time for preparation. The single line of telegraph that connects us with the outer world might at any time be broken, and leave us for weeks together in ignorance of European affairs.

The present military policy of the colony is absurdly inconsistent. It is neither one thing nor the other, and is expensive without being efficient. If we are to adopt the Quaker policy—to go upon the assumption that nobody will attack us because we do not want to attack any one—that the Great Powers are so virtuous ever to do such innocent people any harm—that our wealth will never excite cupidity and that our helplessness will never suggest a raid, then we ought to disarm entirely. Not only ought we not to complete the batteries, but we might resell the ground already purchased, and part with our guns and sites to the highest bidder. Not only is it right to disband the infantry, but we ought to send the artillery soldiers after them, and dispense with any further service on the part of the Volunteers. If the policy of defence is wrong ab initio, we ought to cut the expense down to the very roots; but, on the other hand, if it is right to spend a single penny then we ought to spend as many more pennies as will make the first effective. Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well. It is foolish to maintain a volunteer force to fight an enemy when he has landed, and to despise batteries that might prevent his landing. Any direct attack on Sydney must, of course, be by sea, and it is obvious that the first brunt of the contest ought to fall on those who guard the headlands. The riflemen would hardly find any scope for their skill until the enemy was attempting a landing.

The completion of the batteries is a question quite independent of whether we are to trust to a paid or a volunteer force, except, indeed, so far as this, that the less skilled our soldiers the more effective ought to be the batteries. To have batteries without guns is simply to waste money; to have guns in position inadequately protected, is to run the risk of having them turned against the city. Sir JAMES MARTIN is, therefore, quite correct in stating that unless they can be properly guarded the guns had better be kept in store.

There is only one thing that could justify the present action, or rather inaction, of the Government with regard to the batteries, and that is the existence of a reasonable doubt as to whether the system adopted is a sound one, and whether it might not be a waste of money to complete a scheme which might be so faulty as even to be not worth finishing. But if any doubt of this kind is honestly entertained, then the Government ought to lose no time in submitting the whole of our system of fortification to competent criticism. If no trustworthy military authorities are to be found in the colonies, a request to the Home Government for a further opinion would be, doubtless, attended to. All the details as to the defence of Port Jackson are already familiar at the Horse Guards; and if recent events have thrown any new light on the science of fortification, and the advice heretofore given us should be subject to any modification, we should get the benefit of it. If the scheme should in the main be approved of as being sufficient for ordinary emergencies, and as good as we could have for the money, then we do not believe that the people of the colony would disapprove of such additional expenditure as would complete the works. But the Government is certainly not warranted in leaving them unfinished unless it is prepared without delay to get an authoritative opinion that shall either condemn or commend them.

Sir JAMES MARTIN refers to the steps he took to forecast the probabilities of an attempt to shell the city from vessels lying off Bondi, or to effect

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

Last month a bill was introduced into the Legislative Assembly by Mr. Parkes "to amend the laws relating to friendly societies." This subject was taken in hand about three years ago by Mr. Sutherland, who introduced a bill, which, however, did not progress beyond a first reading.

The bill introduced by Mr. Parkes proposes to repeal the existing Act (17 Vic., No. 26), which was passed nearly twenty years ago, to consolidate and amend the laws relating to friendly societies. Its provisions, therefore, cannot fail to interest large numbers of people who, from evident motives, have joined societies of the class for which it is now intended to legislate.

It is provided at the outset that societies established under the existing Act are to continue, and that their rules, contracts, and bonds are to remain in force, notwithstanding the repeal of the Act. It is proposed that a registrar shall be appointed, and that any number of persons may form and establish a friendly society upon the voluntary subscriptions of the members for payments at the birth of a child, or on the death of a member; or for funeral expenses, the wife or child of a member; or for relief in sickness or for other purposes, "provided that no member shall subscribe or contract for an annuity exceeding fifty-five pounds per annum, or a sum payable on death or other contingency exceeding two hundred pounds." The rules must show that the amounts are to be treated as funds to be filled up with such amounts as may be determined upon in committee. The 8th clause provides how money is to be paid upon the certificate, and contains safeguards against imposition, and also against such societies being abused; medical fees are fixed, and there is a promise that the payment of any moneys under this section may be withheld or suspended if, in the opinion of the persons furnishing the certificate of the death of the child in respect whose death the application is made [such child] has been caused directly or indirectly by the neglect or any improper conduct." The 11th clause provides that on certain conditions any independent, benevolent, and charitable institution or societies "for the purpose of relieving the physical wants and necessities of persons in distressed circumstances, or for improving the dwellings of the labouring classes, or for granting pensions or for providing habitations for the members or other persons elected by them"—may become entitled to the benefits of this Act.

The clauses relating to the dissolution of Friendly Societies are elaborate, and very great care has been taken to secure the rights of persons interested. Such dissolution is not to take place without obtaining the votes of five-sixths in value of the then existing members, including honorary members (if any); nor without the consent of all persons (if any) then receiving or entitled to receive any relief, annuity, or other benefit from the funds. It is also provided that "it shall not be lawful in any society to make any division or appropriation of any part of the funds thereof except for the purpose of carrying into effect the general interests and objects stated in the rules as originally certified, or in the claim of every such member duly satisfied or adequate provision made for satisfying such claim;" and if any member be dissatisfied he may apply to the District Court Judge, who may entertain the application and make direction. When any society is insolvent it may be dissolved, and if it be thought expedient, an application may be made to the registrar by five-eighths of the members, when an appropriation or division of the funds may be made according to his direction. The registrar, who is to report to Parliament every year, would set forth in his annual report particulars of the award. The registration is to be conclusive without appeal. Any society may unite with or transfer its engagements to another. Minors may be elected members, but may not, during minority, hold office. The declaration, verbal or written, made by a person becoming a member of any society or after admission, is to be binding upon the person, and any member found guilty of misstatement, or concealment, may be deprived of all benefits and rights. Trustees are to be appointed, and the property of societies is to be vested in them; and if no trustees shall have been appointed by any society established under the Act, the treasurer thereof, or other person who has charge of the moneys of such society, is to be deemed as trustee under the Act. Buildings for the use of societies may be purchased or leased by the trustee or trustees of any such society, who may bring or defend or cause to be brought and defended any suit or prosecution, in any court of law or equity, touching or concerning any property right or claim to property of the society, for which he or they are trustees. The liability of trustees is limited. They are to be answerable only for the money which shall be actually received by them on account of the society. Societies for which they act. The treasurer of any society established under this Act is to give security. He must either find one sufficient sureties or give the security of the Guarantee Society established in New South Wales.

Other clauses provide how and to whom the treasurer is to account; how the property of a society is to be recovered if an officer should become bankrupt or insolvent. Punishment is provided for fraud in withholding money or securities or property of a society.

Before any friendly society shall be entitled to the benefits of the Act, rules are to be made, set forth—

1. The name of the society and place of meeting for the business of the society.
2. The whole of the objects for which the society is established, the purposes for which the funds shall be applicable, and the conditions under which any member may become entitled to any benefit, and the fines and forfeitures to be imposed on members of such society.
3. The manner of making, altering, amending, and rescinding rules.
4. A provision for the appointment and removal of a general committee of management, of a trustee, treasurer, and other officers.
5. A provision for the investment of the funds, and an annual or periodical audit of accounts.
6. The manner in which disputes between the members of any society, or any person claiming by or through a member or under the rules shall be settled.

The rules are also to provide for the proper keeping of accounts. Copies are to be delivered to the registrar and his assent obtained. There is also a provision that the rules may be altered, amended, or rescinded, and as to how such rules shall be received in evidence. On the death of a member a sum under £100 may be paid without taking out letters of administration. The money of benefit or assurance is a maximum of £100.

Trustees may subscribe to hospitals. One clause provides: "The trustees of any friendly society may out of the funds thereof subscribe to any hospital, infirmary, charitable or benevolent institution such annual or other sum as may be agreed upon by the committee of management, or by a majority of the members at a meeting so called for that purpose, in consideration of any member of such society, his wife or child, or other person nominated being entitled to receive the benefits of such hospital or other institution according to the rules thereof."

Several clauses relate to the settlement of disputes. The 48th clause relates to expulsion of members, and is as follows:—

It shall be lawful for the trustees of any society to require of any members who are volunteers or of a rate not exceeding the rate of contribution hitherto made by such member, to an amount not exceeding one pound in any such rate during the time such members shall be absent out of New South Wales, or to suspend all or any such member to any benefits of such society, and to exempt such member from any contribution payable by such member during the time he may be out of the colony; provided such suspension shall cease so soon as the member shall return to the colony, and he shall thereupon be entitled to the same footing as before he went out of the colony.

The bill consists of fifty clauses and two schedules. It will be fortunate when the business of the House renders it possible to devote attention to the consideration of this and other social measures.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

Before the Mayor and the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. G. Hill, Oatley, Palmer, Meyer, Love, Evans, Smart, and S. Gold.

The persons were fined for drunkenness, and other minor offences were admonished and discharged.

Thomas Wall was charged with unlawfully wounding. Margaret Bethell, of Middle-street, Chippendale, deposed that on last Monday afternoon she was washing in the yard when prisoner, who lives next door, accused her of having kicked a tin out of his yard, and called her names; she denied it, when he, saying "You shall not tamper with me," took a piece of timber from the fence and threw it at her, striking her on the head; the blow knocked her down, and she became insensible. On cross-examination she said that she was not drunk at the time of the assault, nor had she struck the prisoner with an axe in her hand; may have abused him previously on that day, but does not recollect that she did. Catherine E. Bethell, daughter of prosecutrix, deposed that she saw defendant break a piece of timber from the fence and twice struck her mother with it—once on her head and once on her arm; he said that he would kill her, and witness, believing when her mother fell that he had killed her, ran screaming into the street; her mother, however, rose and ran after her, and was followed by prisoner; prisoner was about to strike her mother again with the piece of wood, when Mr. Keeler interfered and deprived him of the weapon. William Grey, surgeon, deposed that he was called upon to attend Mrs. Bethell, whom he found bleeding profusely from a lacerated wound on the skull, in length about two inches and a half, and penetrating to the bone; had some difficulty in stanching the flow of blood, and the woman was faint from loss of blood; considered her life to be in danger, but that has passed away. Prisoner reserved his defence, and was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions. Bail allowed in £20, and two sureties of £10 each.

Edward Norman was charged with having assaulted Mary Ann, his wife. She deposed that about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Wednesday, she and her husband having words, he said, "What are you looking at?" she said he was looking at him; he said, "I will give you a look at me," and fetched an axe, with which he struck a blow at her; she put up her hand, and thereby received cut it, and caused the blood to flow; she ran for protection into a neighbour's house, where he pursued her, and, taking her by the throat, dragged her back, and punched her on the breast, causing the marks which are visible; she lives with him, whom she has supported by washing for him; he has not, without any aid from the defendant, given her any support. Constable Sproule deposed that on the morning of 12 and 1 o'clock this morning he saw defendant fight in Elizabeth-street; he was drunk, and disturbed the people about; witness desired him to go home; he went; a little afterward saw him in the street, behaving in a similar manner, and took him into custody as an idle and disorderly person, having no fixed abode nor lawful means of support. On further examination by the Bench the evidence of the man's character, which was corroborated my constable Tindale, showed that he got employment when he could find it, but the police would not give him a chance of getting a livelihood—that he had done odd jobs for different people since his last imprisonment, but he did not know the people, nor could he call witnesses in support of his statement. To be imprisoned six months.

Margaret Rice was charged with being an idle and disorderly person, and having no reply to make, was sentenced to be imprisoned six months.

Three prisoners were discharged and two were remanded.

On the running paper were fourteen cases, of which two were postponed, three were dismissed, and two were struck out for want of prosecution, and one (wife v. husband) was arranged by the parties. Four persons were fined 5s. each for drunkenness of the Police Act. In Kemp v. Powell, for using insulting words, and Graham v. Murray, for assault, each defendant was fined 20s. Waters v. Scott and wife was case in which acting sub-inspector Waters charged the defendants with having, in Elizabeth-street, Sydney, on the 19th August, and until the date of the information, kept and maintained an ill-governed and disorderly house, against the peace of our lady the Queen, &c., and to which information they, by Mr. Driver, their attorney, pleaded cause to show. Mr. Waters called, as witnesses, John Kinloch and Walter Long, residents in the neighbourhood, agirl of the town (named Brownett), ex constables Sproule and Tindale. Mr. Driver reserved the defence. Committed for trial at Quarter Sessions, and allowed bail, each in £40, and two sureties in £20 each.

Licensing Business.—Twenty-seven hawkers' licenses were granted.

WATER POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

Before the Water Police Magistrate, and Mr. Hale, J.P.

Eight persons were fined for drunkenness or disorderly conduct. John Hawkins and William Helms, seamen, belonging to the ship William Duthie, were sent to gaol for one month, for being absent without leave. John Murphy and William More, seamen, belonging to the ship Dover Castle, were sent to gaol for six weeks for being absent without leave. Jesse Stocks, brought up on suspicion of being of unsound mind, was sent to the Receiving House.

Before Messrs. Hale and Levy, J.P.'s.

Sarah Moses, on remand, is charged with stealing £27, the property of Ann Hopgood. Prosecutrix keeps the Ice Hotel, Paddington, and prisoner lives next door with her husband. A great many witnesses were examined both for the prosecution and for the defence, and the case lasted nearly all day. The money, is alleged to have been stolen from a box in prosecutrix's dressing room, which was broken open for the purpose. The defence was of no public interest, but was so contradictory that the magistrates remarked that there was less perjury on one side or the other. The prisoner was ultimately committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions to be holden in Sydney. Bail allowed, self in £80 and two sureties in £40 each. Mr. Merriman prosecuted, and Mr. Roberts and Mr. Lowe appeared for the defence.

Licensing Business.—Forty-nine applications for hawkers' licenses were granted. The license of the Shamrock, Rose, and Thistle Hotel was transferred from Catherine Digby to G. F. Coden. The license of the New South Wales Family Hotel, King-street, was transferred to a house to be called the Queen's Hotel, Castlereagh-street.

THE JEWS OF AUSTRALIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It affords me a great deal of pleasure in communicating with you through your valuable journal, and I am sure you will not object to allow a space for stating to the public my ideas relative to a subject which I consider is of great importance. I am aiming to an Act which states: "No holder of a licence under this Act shall keep his house open for the sale of liquor, or sell any liquors, or permit the same to be drunk or consumed in his house or premises, except between the hours of 4 in the morning and 12 at night on the six business days of the week, and except between the hours of 6 and 9 in the morning and 1 and 3 in the afternoon, and 8 and 10 at night on Good Friday and Christmas Day; and except between the hours of 1 and 3 in the afternoon on Sundays, and on the three latter days, only for the sale of liquors not to be drunk or consumed on the premises." Relative the Act which I have particularised, it is generally known to the colonists that a great number of Jews are hotel-keepers, and use all their energetic abilities for the public generally; but it is very displeasing to them to see their rising generations shown such a bad example, wherein there prevented from keeping the Sabbath Day holy. I assure the colonists would not be interfered with if an Actere brought forward enabling the Jews to close their hotels on Saturdays, and allowing them to be more attentive to their day of rest. A great number of Jews hold high positions in the colony, and it is gratifying to see amongst the members of Parliament Jews are combined with them. I am sure the few that have the honour of seeing M.H. and M.L.C. attached to their names strive to do all in their power for the good of their constituencies, and for the public generally. Relative to the merchants of New South Wales the Jews number very largely, and it is very gratifying to the poor class of Jews to see their Egyptian are very large importers, great shipping agents, numerous bank and company directors, and a great number of all tradesmen. Respecting gentlemen who hold high Government situations, it is pleasing to see that they are so neglectful to their religion, and do not show a better example to their people; but they say it is not their fault, but the fault of the law, which prevents them from keeping their "Sabbath day holy." How pleasing it would be to the Jews if an Act is passed to enable them to rest on their Sabbath Day, and which would not much interfere with their offices. The public institutions of the colony are strongly supported by the Jews, and they are very pleased in giving their assistance (according to their means) to all charities. The magistrates of Sydney although few in number, do all in their power for the good of the city, and frequently neglect their individual interests in many things for the purpose of attending to their official duties. I could fill a great many sheets of paper if I were to particularise the possessions of the Jews generally of the colony; but as I think it unnecessary, I will not take up any more of your valuable journal, but hope that some matter will be taken in hand by the law-makers to improve on the present Act which I have stated, and which will allow the Jews to improve on their past sins.

Remaining your most obedient servant,
AN ISRAELITE.

BRIDGE OVER THE TURON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As a large portion of the people are interested in the enclosed communication, perhaps you would kindly insert it in the Herald.

"Sir,—Referring to the numerously signed petition presented by you from certain miners and others, resident of the Lower Turon, requesting that a bridge be erected over the Turon River I am directed by the Secretary for Public Work to inform you that the Commissioner for Roads (who is about to visit the locality) has reported that provision for the erection of a bridge over the Turon has not been made, pending the deciding upon the permanent line of road.

"If, however, a sum now on the Estimates, submitted to Parliament is passed, it will provide for a rough one the Turon and up the Macquarie and thence via Chamber's Creek to the Great Western Road, of which line of road a bridge over the Turon will be an indispensable link.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The committee appointed by the subscribers have not, I believe, yet heard from her Majesty's commissioners with respect to the space allowed to the colonies in the French Court, and the extension of time for claims. This is an unfortunate circumstance, since anyway the time now remaining for collection and transport must be very limited. It is too limited, under any circumstances, to allow of an elaborate representation of districts, such as is designed at first. All that now remains possible, and I am not sure that under any circumstances it would not prove the most effective course, is to fill the space with trophies consisting of the various staples of the colonies. The committee will do well to depend for the creation of an effect upon the exhibition of TONS WEIGHT, bales of wool, pounds of coal and shale, and auriferous quartz; and copper, iron, and tin ore; tallow and hides, and timber, &c., in bulk. This sort of display will prove more striking than a minute though a more elaborate collection of objects illustrating the raw materials and manufactures of the colony; and, besides, it is the only mode now remaining of representing the colony. These trophies can be accompanied with statistics and all sorts of tabulated matter required to explain them, and of maps and photographs of the buildings and public works—there are already plenty in the Out-General's office to do duty again.

Thinking that these suggestions may be timely,
I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
H.R.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I was much surprised to read an account in the Sydney Mail, of the 28th instant, relative to matters connected with the Craigend Gold Mining Co., Ian Dun, also as to the amalgamation with the Belmont Co., of which I am totally ignorant, and the depth recently to strike the reef by that Company's shaft, as also to both I was going to open out. All that I have to say is that all I know of the matter is simply I was told that two gentlemen were there one day when I was at dinner and had gone away again, and as far as the place is concerned I hope to give a fair account of it by the crushing, I shall shortly have both Dun and machine finished.

I am, respectfully yours,
ADOLPHUS NORRIE.

HILL END ROAD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Some few days since we wrote you respecting the state of the road hence to Kelso. This, with the pertinent questions asked by our district members, has caused a better state of things, as attention is now being paid to this road.

In this letter we wish to call attention to the Hill End Road from Bathurst. Although we believe that a sum has been placed on the Estimates, very little appears to be done. This is the main road to a centre of 20,000 in population who must be supplied with the necessaries of life. It is only with the utmost difficulty that teams can reach there.

Some short time since, Limberg's Bridge was burnt, and only partially repaired; so badly, in fact, that Walker's team lost week, in crossing it, went through, and before his horses could be extricated one valuable horse was killed. Carrier Burke, at Cole's Crossing, in the same week, had a horse killed. The width of this crossing is so slight that a foot either way would entail total destruction. Carrier Porter was caught in the same crossing, and suffered a loss of £100 in destruction of goods before he could be rescued; and carrier Greenhalgh in the same place, with the utmost difficulty saved the most of his load, which was of the value of £600—but the loss to him was very severe. Accidents like these are of daily occurrence, so common that little attention is now paid to them. The sufferers are poor men, of little education, and who cannot express their grievances.

If this road was properly repaired, which will have to be done, Government will be the gainers in the mileage on the railway between Wallerawang and Macquarie Plains, as the whole of the traffic would then go via Bathurst, in place of being divided as at present. We see very little hopes of a railway being carried there, when a road cannot even be maintained.

OBSTRUCTION OF THOROUGHFARES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—An intolerable nuisance to pedestrians in this city is that when one is crossing a street at the crossing of another street, an omnibus almost invariably pulls up directly in your path. It is very convenient for the omnibus driver, but very inconvenient for the pedestrian, who has often to make a track through the mud to avoid the obstruction. The law was laid down in London years ago, when I was a boy, that no vehicle could obstruct a street crossing, and the decision of the police magistrates of that day has been accepted as law ever since. An omnibus driver who pulled up, say at the corner of Oxford-street and Tottenham Court Road, would know that he was liable to a penalty. A municipal regulation here that no omnibus shall pull up to discharge passengers or otherwise, in a street crossing, would be very beneficial.

Yours, obediently,
PEDESTRIAN.

THE MINES OF LAURIUM.

In our London telegram of the 21st December it was stated that, "The French squadron had proceeded to Athens in view of complications which have arisen on the Laurium Mines question." The matter is somewhat obscure though of ancient history, and at this end of the world may not be generally understood—indeed almost as much is admitted for the English public by the London Times, and attention was directed to the subject two months ago by the Paris correspondent of that journal, who thus elucidates the question:—Every now and then there appears upon the political horizon a very small cloud, of which nobody takes any notice at the time, and which for a long while people only know by name and do not attempt to understand, but which the accidents of State politics ultimately invest with a European importance. Such was, for instance, the Schleswig-Holstein question; and, to go much further back, such was the question of Don Pacifico in Greece. At this moment there is a Greek question pending as obscure in its origin as that of Don Pacifico, but in which the honour and interest of both the French and Italian Governments are concerned, and in regard to which I have occasionally sent you a telegram, with little expectation, however, that the bulk of your readers understood the details of the matters to which it referred. As this question of the Mines of Laurium is, however, daily increasing in importance, and has already been the cause of the downfall of two or three Greek Cabinets, involving changes of Government, and as the last phase of it is the least promising into which it has entered, I will endeavour to give you some particulars which, as they are not altogether devoid of a certain picturesqueness, may not be so dull as the details of such questions usually are.

It was on an evening in May, 1863, that a Frenchman and an Italian disembarked in the Bay of Ergastiria, or, as it is written in our maps, Agastira, from a little native boat, and scrambling up the desert hills, or rather mounds, which rise from the beach, found themselves upon the southern promontory of Attica, where Cape Colonna stretches seaward, with the columns of the Temple of Sunium visible in the distance. It was in search of no crumbling monuments of a departed grandeur that the two gentlemen were exploring these desolate shores, but in quest of something much more practical. As the representatives of one of the most important commercial houses of Marseilles, and the proprietors of valuable mines in Spain and Sardinia, they came to examine the present condition of those ancient lead, zinc, and antimony deposits, which, according to Pliny, were discovered by Erichthonius, King of Athens, in the 15th century B.C., which were being successfully worked in the days of Themistocles, and which, still later, under Pericles, seemed to have obtained their maximum development. It is not necessary to follow the history of the mines of Laurium through the years of the decay of Greece. At the time of Strabo, they were considered exhausted, and the last notice we have of them, by Pausanias, 174 years after Christ, speaks of them as a fact of bygone history. As may be imagined, the surface of the country, which for so many centuries as many as 20,000 slaves were often excavating at one time, presents one huge mass of scoria and débris thrown up into mounds, now covered with soil and herbage, but containing rich mineral deposits, while beneath them may still be found the excavations of the original mines. Our explorers at a later period cleared away the superincumbent rubbish, and descending into one of the galleries were the first human beings who had entered it for 2000 years. Here they found an iron pickaxe without its handle, an earthenware lamp, and rude tracings with some sharp instrument, now filled with a calcareous deposit, and they also found what was much more to their purpose than these old relics. With the practised eye of men accustomed to the search of metalliferous deposits, they perceived the value of the mounds of débris which the old miners had rejected, and then and there without further delay, they entered into negotiations with the Paredre and Chinôtis, or village headman and his council. They found that some of the property was in dispute between the village and the Government. However, they completed the purchase with the village, determining to make it right with the Government afterwards. A treaty of purchase was formally made, and the whole village turned out to celebrate the event in rejoicings and festivities. The explorers returned to Athens highly delighted, and found no difficulty with the Government, who guaranteed them possession of the property, irrespective of the results of the pending dispute, upon the payment of a further sum of 10,800 francs. At the same time these gentlemen obtained from the Governor the concession of the right of exploring the ancient mines existing over a certain extent of the Commune of Laurium and the right to the cession of the argentiferous galena which exist in their neighbourhood. Upon securing this, they instantly set to work. Having great experience and abundant capital at their disposal, they soon made more than realized their most sanguine expectations. In a few years a town of 3000 inhabitants sprang up on the shores of the once deserted bay. conversion of a desert into a source of such vast wealth failed to excite the cupidity alike of the Greek Government and the brigands to whom it grants its protection. One, signing himself Kytzos, Prince of Attica, demanded 50,000 f. of black mail from the company as the price of leaving them alone, but he was fortunately killed before he had an opportunity of putting his demands into execution. Spanos, who succeeded Kytzos and Arrambakis, since of melancholy notoriety, also attempted on one occasion to seize the Director-General of the Mines, and finally a pitched battle was on the point of being fought between a Greek company and the Franco-Italians, which was only averted by the arrival of troops from Athens. Public feeling at last got so worked up in Greece at the sight of a number of foreigners exporting their mineral wealth and pocketing the profits, that the Government was forced to pass a law declaring all scoria and debris of old mines Government property, and giving the law a retrospective effect, on the strength of which they claimed not merely an exorbitant tax from the Laurium Company for the future, but a sum of 2,000,000 f. for back payment for the eight years before the law was made. This the Company naturally refused to pay, and the diplomatic agents of the two Governments found themselves compelled to interfere to protect their subjects from so extortionate a demand. The Greeks continued more obstinate as they perceived the richness of the prize won by the foreigner, the value of which was estimated by their own official reports at a milliard of francs. The company in despair, after the events of the last two years have so completely crippled the power and influence of France, of being able to continue to work their property in security, offered at last to sell for 14,000,000 f. to the Greek Government what the latter valued at a milliard. An agreement to this effect was made with Komoundorous, then Prime Minister, and he promised to bring in a bill authorising the sale. At the last moment, however, he perceived no such bill would be carried, and attempted to postpone it. The King would not permit this breach of faith, and Komoundorous, rather than face the inevitable defeat which it would entail, resigned. He was succeeded by Deligeorgis, who has written a memorial defending the law and receding from the agreement of his predecessor. He has proposed, indeed, to abolish the law, and let the question be tried by the Judges; but this is a manifest absurdity, as the dispute only rises out of a law which would then not exist—so that the question itself would fall to the ground. Meantime, the French and Italian Governments are both beginning to lose patience. The conduct of the Greek Government is apparently not to be justified by any moral code, but they venture upon it because the complications in Europe are such that they believe any rupture upon even the most trivial point in the East would be a spark which might be fanned into a flame to their own profit. There can be no doubt that five years ago France would not have tolerated for a day the action of the various Greek Cabinets, whose ruin the Laurium question has successively involved in this matter; and there is a limit even to French patience just now, while the Italian Government is rising into a position of such European importance, that it may not be loath to take advantage of the occasion which is thus afforded of asserting with a strong hand the justice of its claim.

MENDELSSOHN'S DEATH.

The Kölnische Zeitung has been enabled to give the following extract from the second volume of "Moscheles' Life," by Mrs. Moscheles, now in the Press:—

"On the 17th of September (Moscheles writes in his journal) the Mendelssohn family returned from Switzerland. Mentally our delightful friend is just the same, but physically he seems to me changed; he has aged, he is languid, and his walk is less quick than it used to be. And yet if one sees him at the piano, or hears him talking about art and artists, he is all life and fire. His friend Julius Rietz is just entering on his post of Capellmeister at Leipsic, and that is a great delight to him. 'There's another,' said Mendelssohn, 'who really loves good music, who can produce good things himself, and can bring the productions of others to the highest pitch of perfection, and now the Gewandhaus concerts will have quite the genuine ring about them. And then what quantities of music we will have at home! Rietz plays the 'cello so well, it will be a splendid winter.' . . . On the 9th of October Mendelssohn called for Charlotte and me to take a walk with him; we saw him coming slowly and languidly through the garden to the house. When my wife affectionately asked him how he felt, he answered, 'How I feel? Well, I feel all grey in grey.' She tried to cheer him by saying that the sunny weather and the walk would do him good. And really, during our stroll through the Rosenthal, he became so bright and lively that we forgot his indisposition. He told us about his last stay in London—his visit to the Queen; how prettily she had sung to him, when he had played to her and the Prince; how she had then said in such a kind manner, 'He had so often given her pleasure, was there no way of giving him any?' how he had begged to see the children, and she had conducted him into the beautifully-arranged nursery department, and shown him the little princes and princesses, all so well brought up and so good that it was quite a treat to see them. Then he spoke about his wife's coming birthday, for which occasion he had bought her a cloak. Another invaluable present he had also himself prepared for her for this birthday. On a tour that he and Klingemann had made in Scotland they kept a journal together, Klingemann writing verses, Mendelssohn drawing. These hasty sketches he had now worked out, collected, and bound together, but when he presented this gift to his wife, hoping to please her with it, he was already at death's door!

"We separated (continues the journal) at about 1 o'clock, in the best spirits. But already that same afternoon, in the Freges' house, he became very unwell. He had gone there to try and again persuade Frau Frege, that artist whom he, and on so highly esteemed, to sing in the approaching performance of his 'Elijah.' 'She shrinks from appearing in public,' he had said to us a few previously, 'because she has been suffering a deal from her throat; but nobody can sing as she does, I must inspire her with courage.' A literal account which here follows of his and Frau Frege on the 9th of October and personal communication. He room with these words—'I am and every day, till you give me my 'Elijah'). But I feel dreadfully much so that I actually cried.' my trio. room to order lights, and when I was sitting in the other room in the sofa and said his hands had got quite stiff and and he thought he would rather be well advised and just take a run round the town, for he felt too bad to play properly. When he got into the open air he felt it was best to go straight home, and there sat down in the sofa-corner, where Cécile found him at 7 o'clock, his hands again quite numbed. The next day the doctor applied leeches to relieve the severe headache from which he was suffering; he took it for disorder of the stomach, and it was only much later that he declared it to be an excessive irritation of the nervous system. I had for a long time—even before Fanny's death—been struck by his paleness when he was conducting or playing; everything seemed to tire him more than formerly. The whole town was terror-struck, his friends trembled, when the news of his illness spread abroad; but when he began to amend, they again believed in ultimate recovery. A few days afterwards he received visits from his friends, was in good spirits, and made plan after plan. He even wanted to go to Vienna to fulfil his promise of conducting the 'Elijah,' but his friends dissuaded from this exertion. To Frau Frege, who went to see him, he said, 'Well, I gave you a pretty fright; I must have been a cheerful-looking object.' By degrees the convalescent felt better and better, and was allowed on the 28th to take a walk with his wife. He even wanted to go out again, but the careful wife persuaded him to rest, and he consented; and, alas! immediately afterwards he sank down. They called it paralysis. The anxiety and sadness of the next days cannot be described. The whole town shared it with relations and friends. Once more an apparent improvement showed itself, but he soon became highly excited, and began talking English wildly; and on the 3rd of November, at half-past 2, he had a third attack, which completely shattered his senses. The bulletin is besieged, but the news which it gives tell of no improvement, and so the 4th of November draws nearer.

"Midday.—The physicians, Dr. Hammer, Hofrath Carus, and surgeon Walther, are with the patient by turns. The bulletin which Schleinitz writes declares the case to be hopeless.—Herr and Frau Frege, David, Rietz, Schleinitz, my wife and I remain anxiously near the sick room. The only words of encouragement that the doctors can give are these: 'If there should be no fresh attack, the seeming quiet may bring about a happy change, and he may be saved.' But this repose was only the result of the decline of his physical strength.

"Evening.—From 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when a repetition of the attack was feared at the same hour as the day before, utter unconsciousness set in. All the more delicate organs and mental powers were gone, and he lay quiet, breathing loud and heavily. In the evening we were all assembled around his bed, without fearing a disturbance; his angelically peaceful countenance, the stamp of his immortal soul, impressed itself deeply and indelibly on our spirits. His Cécile bore the terrible weight of her grief heroically—she never once broke down, not a word betrayed her inner suffering. His brother Paul, like a moving marble statue, was continually by his bedside. This tragic scene was still heightened by the vainly expected arrival of his sister, Frau Dirichlet, and his relations, Herr and Frau Schunck. Dr. Härtel had gone off to Berlin to fetch her, and also Dr. Schönlein; but they did not come. From 9 in the evening the fatal end began to approach, and the breathing became slower. The doctors counted the respirations as if they wanted to enrich science with new discoveries; his features became transfigured; Cécile knelt by his bedside, suffused in tears; and in the deathly silence Paul Mendelssohn, David, Schleinitz, and I surrounded the bed in earnest prayer. With every breath that escaped from him, I felt the struggle of the great spirit which was breaking loose from its mortal frame. At twenty-four minutes past 9 he breathed out his great soul with a deep sigh. The doctor took Cécile into another room, and supported her in her speechless grief. I knelt by the bed, accompanying the soul of the departed one to heaven with my prayers, and kissed the lofty brow before it had grown cold under the hand of death. We remained some hours together, bewailing the irreparable loss, and then each one retired, with his grief. His children had been sent to bed at 9, and were already sleeping calmly when God called their father to Himself. Even the awful solemnity of the funeral celebration can never come up to the feelings which overpowered me then, and which I shall always carry about with me in remembrance of that beloved friend, a man beyond the possibility of ever being replaced. The whole city mourned, the Gewand

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

REDFERN.—The usual fortnightly meeting of Council was held within the Municipal Chambers, Pitt-street, on Friday, the 27th December. Present—The Mayor (Mr. H. Hudson), with Aldermen Andrew, Bingham, Hume, Stanley, Williamson, and Parr. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. The Chairman of the Finance Committee brought up a report recommending payment of sundry accounts, amounting to £43 7s., which, on the motion of Alderman Stanley and Williamson, was adopted, and payment authorised. The report of Improvement Committee, dated 20th December, was submitted, and on the motion of Alderman Andrew and Stanley, it was adopted. Correspondence was read. 1. Letter from Messrs. Rolin and Salter, the Council's solicitors, replying to certain matters submitted for their opinion. 2. Letter from Mr. George Wagg, relative to the dangerous state of his house at the corner of Morehead and Redfern streets, caused, as he alleges, by removing the sand below the foundation, when making Morehead-street, and asking the Council for some compensation. Moved by Alderman Stanley, "That both of these letters be received." Seconded by Alderman Hume, and carried. Pursuant to notice, it was moved by Alderman Bingham (for Alderman Allen), "That 220 tons of blue metal be laid upon Pitt-street, from Turner-street southwards as far as built upon, at a cost not to exceed 13s. per ton." Seconded by Alderman Williamson. After some discussion Alderman Stanley moved an amendment, "That the quantity of blue metal be limited to one hundred tons." Seconded by Alderman Parr. On the question being put this amendment was carried. The clerk, in accordance with directions given, submitted a list of those parties who are in arrears with the payment of their rates, and it was resolved to take proceedings for the recovery of the same if not paid immediately. The meeting then terminated—W. S. WARMOUTH, Council Clerk.

THE LATE TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER.—The Levant Herald of the 25th ultimo says:—"Djemil Pasha was no mere routine Minister. Sagacious, far-seeing, thoroughly upright in character, prudent, vigorous and decisive when occasion demanded, he had in him all the elements of a statesman capable of making his mark upon his age; and when it was known that the new Grand Vizier had selected him for the important post of Foreign Affairs, the universal feeling was one of satisfaction, and of a full conviction that in this instance, the pithy saying had been realized of the right man having been fitly chosen for the right place. Three times Ambassador in Paris, Djemil Pasha was warmly esteemed both by the political and the social and literary world in the French capital. Of gentlemanly and graceful personal appearance, a master of several European languages, his suavity of manner charmed all with whom he came in contact, and his premature death has been learnt in every circle in Constantinople with feelings of deep and sincere concern. It has been a matter of remark that aneurism of the heart, of which he died, is often hereditary, and that his distinguished father died of the same treacherous and fatal disease. Djemil Pasha leaves a [illegible] Bey, and a daughter, both still young. [illegible] brothers, Ahmed Bey, Mazhar Pasha, and [illegible] have all at different times filled high offices

THE VIENNA EXHIBITION.

(From the Illustrated London News.)

THE Vienna Universal Exhibition of Arts and Industry, will be of great commercial importance, and British manufacturers should lose no time in preparing to make a good appearance there. Few of our untravelled countrymen know what a vast field of useful production and exchange is to be found in the eastern provinces of the Austrian Empire, and the adjacent countries of European Turkey. The agricultural, pastoral, and mineral wealth that Nature has bestowed on those parts of the Continent will afford a rich payment for the mercantile enterprise, by which their various populations are made acquainted with the results of Western science and skill. Several millions of different races, inhabiting the fertile lands which are traversed by the Danube and its tributary rivers, from the Carpathians to the Balkan, have yet to be introduced to this mutual exchange of substantial benefits among civilized nations. Though German and Swiss, French and Italian commercial activity may seem likely to get the start of us in this quarter, it is to be hoped that Great Britain will yet make an effort worthy of her high position in the world; and that neither negligence and torpid indifference, nor a fit of niggardly distrust, will prevent our Government and the influential classes here from contributing a fair share to the Vienna Exhibition.

The Exhibition Palace, now in course of building, is admirably situated in the magnificent public park of that city, called the Prater. The area apportioned to the Exhibition will embrace from four to five English square miles. The covered space available for the Exhibition will be about 1,150,000 square feet, being considerably more than that occupied by the Paris Exhibition of 1867. The Exhibition building will be 2968 feet long by 672 feet wide. It is designed by Herr Karl Hasenauer, an eminent Austrian architect. There will be a main gallery or nave intersecting the whole edifice. This gallery has cross galleries, or transepts on each side, which are so placed as not to obstruct the view from either end. Between the transepts and the nave lie the garden-courts, which will also be available for exhibition purposes, and each country will have one or more of these transepts allotted to it, together with the portion of the nave and the garden-court adjoining. A rotunda will rise from the centre of the building, and divide the main gallery in the middle. This rotunda, when finished, will be the largest canopy-shaped edifice without supports which has ever been erected. It has an outside diameter of 353 feet and its height is 275 feet; so that it is twice as large in span as the dome of St. Peter's at Rome, or that of the London Great Exhibition of 1862. In the interior, the roof of the dome rises 260 feet above the floor. The rotunda is being constructed of iron, after a design by Mr. Scott Russell. The main gallery will be 82 feet wide, and each of the transepts 49 feet wide and 246 feet long. The latter are separated by courts, which are designed for such objects as can be exposed in uncovered places. The number of square metres within the Exhibition building will amount to 103,000. East of the Prater Rondo, facing the main gallery, the Art-Exhibition building will be erected, covering an area of 6995 metres. Buildings of a permanent character, sufficiently protected, will be provided for the exhibition of works of fine art.

From the chief building covered galleries lead to a large conservatory, and to smaller pavilions which are intended for the exhibition of horticultural productions, or of aquariums. A separate hall will be erected for machinery in motion, 590 metres in length and 28 metres in width. In this hall will also be found hydraulic machines, diving apparatus, and other matters. The Imperial villa, and the hall in which the jury will deliberate and make their awards, will also be erected in the grounds, which will be laid out under the direction of a landscape-gardener. Among other attractions, the Council of the Exhibition have decided on having a permanent aquarium of considerable magnitude erected. Their choice of an architect has fallen on Mr. Charles H. Driver, who planned and erected the aquarium at the Crystal Palace last year.

The whole Exhibition ground will be drained by a system of drainage pipes, carrying water and other liquids to the Danube, and every measure has been taken to have a sufficient supply of water in all parts of the Exhibition. Gas will be furnished by the Imperial Continental Gas Company, at the usual pressure. There will be some work for the Exhibition to be done by steam road-rollers and traction-engines or road-rollers, which will be paid for by the Austrian Commission. There will be competitive trials with steam fire-engines, and exhibitors are invited to send special engines for this purpose; such engines will be considered as objects of exhibition, and, if lent for use, their fuel and care will be at the charge of the Austrian Commission. There will likewise be special trials held with agricultural machinery and implements, in fields in the neighbourhood of Vienna, or in such places as can be easily reached by the Exhibition railway. Agricultural machines will not be exhibited in the machinery-hall, but in a pavilion specially built for that purpose.

Machinery, of course, will form an important feature of the Exhibition, and we would call the attention of English manufacturers to the opportunity afforded to exhibit either fixed steam-boilers, fixed steam-engines, or portable engines, and also steam-engines and steam generators for service in the machinery hall. Machinery and apparatus specially adapted to the requirements of the Exhibition may also be supplied by exhibitors; and exhibitors supplying such machines and apparatus intended for special service during the Exhibition will enjoy special privileges, to be arranged between them and the Director-General. If British makers lend cranes, hoists, boilers, and engineers for use of British exhibitors, no fees will be levied by the Imperial Austrian Commission for the use of the same by British exhibitors; but if British exhibitors lend such machinery for the use of Foreign exhibitors, arrangements will be made by the Austrian Director-General to indemnify British exhibitors for the use of their machinery. The power required to set machinery and main shafting for driving machinery in motion will be supplied by the Austrian Commission, and exhibitors will in no case be charged for motive-power supplied by the main driving-shafts in the machinery-hall. Coals from the best Austrian and Prussian coal-mines, and feeding-water for the boilers supplying steam-engines driving machinery in the machinery-hall, will be supplied by the Austrian Commission free of expense. Stokers will also be provided for the steam-boilers lent for service in the Exhibition; or, if the exhibitor should prefer to employ his own people, the wages of the latter will be paid by the Austrian Commission according to a fixed tariff.

LORD SALISBURY ON EDUCATION.—Lord Salisbury distributed the prizes gained in connection with the Oxford local examination at Manchester, on the 11th October. He spoke at some length upon educational subjects, and particularly upon the evils incident to a system of State instruction. He would not say that the passing of the Education Act was not a wise step, but I am afraid (he said) that the result will be that both the machinery employed will not be equal to the expectations entertained, and also that in teaching the lower classes the elements of useful knowledge they will be untaught something that is still more valuable than even that useful knowledge—namely, the independence and the liberty which is the special characteristic of Englishmen. "That is my fear, and already you see how many difficulties you have to meet in this policy of paternal education. You come across that terrible religious difficulty at once. You meet with people on the one side who will tell you that they will not have the public money employed in the propagation of dogmas, while other people will tell you that they will not have the public money employed for the support of an atheistical education. Both sides are equally sincere, both sides are equally convinced that what the other party recommends is absolutely inconsistent with the public weal; and you may depend upon it that so long as the system of State support continues so long this controversy will rage. And then you have the difficulty of machinery; you have entrusted education to Boards popularly elected, and it is in the genius of the English people and English institutions that if the Government is to undertake it you should do it in that way; but I am sorry to say that when the Boards are elected, especially when they are elected to do something which does not fall naturally within the attribution of Government, this feature may be discovered in their actions—that they begin by being enthusiastic and extravagant, and they are very apt to end in being wooden. At first they are set in motion by the earnest and excellent men to whom the movement is owing from which they spring; those earnest men take their place upon the board and work its machinery. In carrying out their end they work it without much regard to what they consider a vulgar consideration—viz., that of the ratepayers' pockets; but after a time the rate bills come in, and the ratepayers have to pay, and then the ratepayers begin to cry out, and the earnest and excellent men no longer get elected to the board." Lord Salisbury expressed his opinion that it w[illegible] education would have any sens[illegible] diminution of crime. "But there [illegible] view from which I look [illegible] great and important benefits. [illegible] that the pursuit of any unh[illegible] is a great blot in our existing so[illegible] the more cultured part of it, or [illegible] parts of it. There is the pursu[illegible] excitement given by stimulants [illegible] more terrible excitement of gam[illegible] forms, to which, I fear, almost ev[illegible] gives itself up. But in the mi[illegible] discouraging, though we see [illegible] morbid excitement are still pure[illegible] two consoling facts to mark our[illegible] that fact, which has been referre[illegible] and which cannot be referred [illegible] a hundred years ago the upper a[illegible] as much given to intoxication [illegible] lower classes is now, and [illegible] they have been cured. When [illegible] ease, and when we have the cu[illegible] without presumption to some [illegible] us to get rid of the disease; [illegible] tween that age and this is th[illegible] education. I account for the [illegible] believe it to be a physical ch[illegible] which Nature has endowed u[illegible] cise; for if we have not suffic[illegible] and if we do not find brain ex[illegible] cultivation of our minds, we [illegible] craving for excitement which [illegible] in debauchery, in nameless [illegible] recount. But the enormous [illegible] mind with knowledge, wit[illegible] that when this pressure for ex[illegible] —a pressure which is purely [illegible] course of nature come to all—n[illegible] you, if you have subjects of [illegible] excitement, you will not b[illegible] excesses; but if you have no[illegible] something to give that year[illegible] vent, you will assuredly go [illegible] so placed as not to obstruct the view from either end. [illegible] deplore. I look, therefore, [illegible] culture as the probable mo[illegible] Providence has placed in hands against those morals defects of which [illegible] is only too guilty." The no[illegible] on the dangers attending a diffusion of education, [illegible] begged his hearers not to lean any honest labour as unworthy of them [illegible] "genteel."

"GENTILITY."—The Dacus asserts that that "gentility" to which d Salisbury casually alluded in his admirable[illegible] other day works far more [illegible] than any combination of [illegible] famine prices. If we [illegible] statistics on such a subje[illegible] thousands of families [illegible] endeavouring to keep up [illegible] portion to their means, [illegible] plunged into the deepe[illegible] call on their confi[illegible] astrous pretentiousness [illegible] vails in other regions. [illegible] be a shopkeeper; the [illegible] be a merchant's clerk [illegible] clerk must be educated [illegible] the Church; and they [illegible] the social position and [illegible] character, and incur the[illegible] sake of a weak and [illegible] course, can desire to [illegible] youth. But the impu[illegible] efforts to distinguish [illegible] stances is vastly diffe[illegible] which loves to "keep [illegible] style of living altog[illegible] is one of the g[illegible] and it is hard [illegible] remedied, except [illegible] good sense and hone[illegible] generally. The exa[illegible] sons into commerce [illegible] cannot be expected [illegible] consider a clerkship [illegible] more "genteel" th[illegible] pounds a week; or [illegible] income of two hund[illegible] selves degraded if [illegible] studied the small [illegible] had a little less "[illegible]cility" and a trifle more thrifty, prudent, and plaindering of limited means, our social life in Eng[illegible] would be a good deal more comfortable and pleworthy than it is.

THE MILITARY SYSTEM OF BERLIN AND FRANCE.—In commenting on a German official account of the Franco-Prussian[illegible] (translated by Mr. Clarke), the Times observes:—"We are conscious that but a feeble idea can [illegible] been given of the magnitude of the task imposed upon the Chiefs of the German Army, or of the [illegible] scientific manner in which all difficulties were [illegible]mounted. The military student will find his trou[illegible] well repaid if he will study the book itself, as far [illegible] has gone, with a map and a determination to [illegible]ter the subject. General readers may perhaps be caught some mental impression of the difficulti[illegible]tending the sudden mobilization of an army [illegible] a peace to a war footing; they may see [illegible] that is a different and far grander task [illegible] the provision of food for 30,000 men at autumn[illegible]manœuvres, especially as several of the Germans [illegible] had to be transported many hundreds of mi[illegible] by railway, the whole work being crowded into a [illegible]iod of less than three weeks from the first thoug[illegible] of war. And they may be inclined to question how [illegible]England would achieve the task of mobilizing her [illegible]gular army, reserves, militia, and volunteers, un[illegible] similar circumstances. Heaven forbid that we [illegible] prophesy evil! We firmly believe that wh[illegible] the time comes we shall be ready, but only read [illegible] because before then the persistent warnings of ex[illegible] officer who has been present in or studied mode[illegible]war in its details will have sunk into the hearts of [illegible]eir countrymen and brought forth some good fr[illegible] in a general determination not to rest satisfied [illegible] anything short of real readiness for war if it [illegible] ever forced upon us. At present our system [illegible]proaches more nearly that of the French than the Germans, the chief difference being that as yet we have but few reserves to call up and have not ev[illegible] decided upon our transport system, much less [illegible]vided means for regular supply. We have the sa[illegible] system of centralization as the French hadin 1870. Our regiments are not quartered, nor [illegible]kely to be, in the midst of those who are to fill up the ranks in case of war, and our militia, though composed of excellent materials, is deficient in training an[illegible] in that surest bond of discipline, complete confidence among the men, their officers will know, [illegible]not only how to die with them, but how to keep the alive and insure success to their arms. Above all, e have no such institution as the General Staff at Berlin, which includes officers whose business it is to be intelligent, to know all the military progress whic[illegible] is passing around them, and to take care that their o[illegible]n country is behindhand in nothing conducive to the preservation of her safety, her honour, and the dignit[illegible] befitting a great nation."

THE IMMEDIATE PROSPECTS OF BRITISH TRADE.—The Times observes that the Board of Trade returns for the ninth of September, as well as those for the first ninemonths of the year 1872, present, at first sight, a [illegible]ry encouraging picture of commercial progress; bu[illegible] it has been justly pointed out that if the rate of increase be measured by quantity instead of by value, the result is very different, and by no means equally satisfactory. The most notable illustration of this difference is, of course, furnished by the exportation of coal. The exportation of British coal in 1872 has scarcely exceeded in quantity the exportation for the corresponding period of 1871, while in the month just elapsed, it has been much less than in September, 1871, owing to a rise of price which has more than doubled the declared value of each ton. The same remark applies, with little variation, to the iron trade, which inevitably fluctuates with the price of coal, and these results will probably be still more conspicuous in the next returns. With such facts before us, it is impossible to regard the immediate prospects of British trade very hopefully, in spite of its continued expansion in pecuniary value. It has long been realised that Great Britain depends mainly upon her abundant coal supply for her commercial supremacy in Europe. It is the one vast advantage which counterbalances, and but just counterbalances, the much higher rate of wages in this country as compared with any part of the Continent. Now, the addition of more than 100 per cent. to the price of English coal has precisely the same effect, for the time being, whether it arises from a rapid exhaustion of English coal-fields, or from an organized strike among English colliers, or from a conspiracy among English coal-owners or coal-buying middlemen. It is to be feared that the evil can only cure itself in one way—by a contraction of the demand for coal in every branch of manufacture which employs steam power. At last a reaction will doubtless come by means of a sudden fall in the price of coal, but it may not come before serious distress has been inflicted on the artisan classes, nor will the course of English trade right itself again on the Continent so readily as in England itself.

The case of the Border St[illegible] shows that this might well have been repaired, [illegible] not the industry of the South been disorganize[illegible] the measure, and its ruin completed by negro demo[illegible]zation and systematic misrule."

CONSUMPTION OF FOOD AND DRINK.—An instru[illegible] article in a German newspaper makes known, [illegible] carefully selected statistics, the great increase [illegible] has taken place of late years in most Europ[illegible] countries in the consumption of articles of food [illegible] drink which our grandfathers regarded as luxur[illegible] Of course, the increase has been much greater [illegible] some articles than in others. In Prussia, the ye[illegible] consumption of meat per head had advanced fr[illegible] 33 lbs. in 1806 to 40 lbs. in 1849; brandy had gro[illegible] from 3 quarts to 8, and wine from ¾ quart to 2 qua[illegible] The increase in sugar, again, was from 1½ lb. [illegible] 7 lbs., and in coffee from ⅜ lb. to 4 [illegible] These figures do not bring us to the latest tim[illegible] but the increase has been even in a grea[illegible] ratio during the years since 1849. Thus, K[illegible] estimates the total consumption of sugar per he[illegible] of the population in the area of the Zollverein for [illegible] year 1860 at 7-37 lb., and in the year 1864 it [illegible] advanced to 9.23 lb. The annual consumption of [illegible] population of London is given, on the authority of [illegible] Economist, as follows:—In the year 1843: Sug[illegible] 16.54 lb.; tea, 1.47 lb.; cocoa, 0.09 lb.; wine, [illegible] gallon; spirits, 0.87 gallon. In the year 186[illegible] Sugar, 41.17 lb.; tea, 3.26 lb.; cocoa, 1.14 lb. [illegible] wine, 0.40 gallon; spirits, 0.89 gallon. From the[illegible] figures it appears that England bears the palm easil[illegible] in all such matters. From the recent works of M. [illegible] Block, "L'Europe Politique et Sociale," it appea[illegible] that the sugar consumption of France per head p[illegible] year is 7.4 kilogrammes, that of Prussia 8.7[illegible] Austria 2.46, Russia 1.2, Holland 7.03, Belgium 4.0[illegible] while England stands at 19.88 kilogrammes. It [illegible] the same with tea, as we showed the other day [illegible] England also uses above half as much silk as th[illegible] whole of the rest of Europe.

POPULATION OF CALCUTTA.—The results of th[illegible] census of Calcutta proper, taken last January, hav[illegible] just been published. The total population is stated a[illegible] 447,601 souls, showing an increase of nearly 70,000 [illegible] since 1866, or close upon 20 per cent. on the then [illegible] calculated number of 377,924. Of the existing popula[illegible]tion, rather more than two-thirds are males, a fact [illegible] which, it may be observed, is sometimes forgotten in [illegible] instituting comparisons between the birth rate of Cal[illegible]cutta and that of other places where the sexes are more [illegible] equally divided. More than half the population consists [illegible] of Hindoos, while the Mahommedans number a little [illegible] less than one-third. Of Hindoo males in Calcutta, [illegible] one in three can read and write, and of Hindoo females [illegible] one in twenty-three; for Mahommedans the average[illegible] are one in seven of males, and one in forty-one of [illegible] females. Compared with agricultural districts in [illegible] Bengal these educational statistics are remarkably [illegible] good. A recent census of 103 villages in the district [illegible] adjoining Calcutta showed that only one male in six[illegible]teen, out of a population of nearly 35,000, could read, [illegible] write, and count to any useful extent, while only six [illegible] women in the whole tract were found to know any[illegible] thing of the three R.'s.

RAILWAY STATISTICS OF ENGLAND.—There are no [illegible] exponents of the development of the country's wealth [illegible] in recent times more striking than our railway statis[illegible]tics. For twenty years we have been sinking from [illegible] £14,000,000 to £15,000,000 of hard cash annually in [illegible] the railways of the United Kingdom. The figures for [illegible] these years, 1852-1871, are before us. In 1852 the [illegible] whole capital raised upon shares, debentures, and [illegible] loans by the various companies amounted in actual [illegible] money to £264,166,000. By 1871 this sum had in[illegible]creased to £562,680,000. From the savings of nine[illegible]teen years upwards of £298,500,000 had therefore been [illegible] invested in these undertakings. In the earlier [illegible] year we had 7336 miles of permanent way. [illegible] By 1871 the total length was 15,376 miles. [illegible] The cost per mile of railroad in 1851 [illegible] was £33,283; but land, wages, and commodities [illegible] generally rose in value between that time and the [illegible] present, and railway construction became more costly. [illegible] In 1871 the average cost of the lines then open was [illegible] £35,944 a mile, or £2661 more than in 1851. Some [illegible] account, too, should be taken in this comparison of [illegible] the circumstance that latterly the lines have been [illegible] more driven into towns than formerly, and thus a [illegible] greater proportionate cost has accrued. In 1851 the [illegible] total receipts which the companies gathered from all [illegible] sources were £15,710,000; nineteen years of the enterprise more than trebled the sum; the receipts in 1871 [illegible] amounting to £48,892,000. The receipts per mile in [illegible] the earlier year were £2141; in the latter, £3063; [illegible] exclusive of miscellaneous receipts in 1871—an [illegible] increase of £922, or 43 per cent. on the [illegible] average mile. The number of passengers conveyed [illegible] in 1851 is put down at 89,102,000. But here the [illegible] figures are of the most irregular and indeterminate [illegible] value. They simply represent journeys. The man[illegible] for example, who travels from Westminster to Victoria [illegible] counts for one, just as he who travels from London to [illegible] Ed

BIRCH DISTRICT.

THE NOTED HADDON RIGGS STATION, formerly the property of Messrs. Christie and Wentworth. IMPERATIVE SALE.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH are instructed to sell by public auction, at their Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on TUESDAY, the 4th February next, at 11 o'clock, The above first-class fattening property, together with its improvements, small herd of cattle, and 31,000 SHEEP, more or less. HADDON RIGGS STATION is situated about ninety miles from Dubbo, on the Macquarie River, to which it has frontage on both sides of upwards of eighteen miles, and includes some of the best permanently-watered parts of that river. It comprises twelve blocks of country, as well as the celebrated blocks "Bumbaloo," on the Macquarie River, and embraces 220,000 acres of the richest fattening land, consisting partly of open plains, intersected by open box forests and timbered ranges, and the Macquarie. The carrying capabilities of the run are very large, and with a small additional outlay for conserving water on the back country, it could easily be made fit for double the present number of sheep in my stock. Within the last three years very considerable improvements have been made. The whole of the homestead buildings, including home paddock, woolshed, woolstores, and other buildings, have all been roofed and put in good order; the woolpress has been remade, and by a substantial shed, a splendid strut of water has been obtained for washing. Various other sheds have also been constructed, and the "Bunderoo," an immense lagoon capable of watering 20,000 sheep, has been closely fenced in. For the sheep after washing, a paddock of 10 acres has been enclosed with high pailing fences, and laid down in couch grass; and every appliance is now in the station for sheep-washing the wool in a first-class manner. A tale of this season's clip may be inspected at the auctioneers' wool store, Circular Quay. Most of the above-named improvements are erected on 480 acres of purchased land, selected as many others too numerous to mention. There is also three large paddocks. With Haddon Riggs will be sold the following sheep, viz:—

Ewes.....	19,000	more or less, from 3 years up
	5,000	ditto ditto, unsiedens
	2,000	ditto ditto, 4 and 5 years with Jumbuck foot
Wethers ..	11,000	ditto ditto, 2 to 5 years
Rams	300	ditto ditto
Stud flock...	400	ditto ditto
Weaners ..	12,000	ditto ditto, mixed sexes, branded from April to August, all to count as sheep.
Sheep ..	51,000	more or less

 Of the lambs at foot to be given away, there are ABOUT 1900 born November and December, and about 200 of same age from the stud flock, the property of two Lord-rams. Of the fattening sheep, 2000 wethers and 2000 ewes were expected to be ready for market by three of sale. These flocks have, under the painstaking care of the late superintendent (a first-class management), been carefully culled and classed yearly, while strict attention has been paid to the rams introduced among them. During the last two years many valuable ewes and rams, principally from the noted Mudgee flocks belonging to Messrs. C. C. and G. H. Cox, have been added to the station for stud purposes, in addition to two unrivalled rams, which took first prize, as the best pen of any sex, at the Mudgee Exhibition of 1871. In fact, no sample has been spared to bring the Haddon Riggs flocks up to a high standard of excellence. This property, unsurpassed as a breeding as well as a fattening run, is now brought forward for peremptory sale, and capitalists seeking a first-class investment are invited to inspect it. Terms at sale.

COUNTRY FREEHOLD ESTATE, MACQUARIE PLAINS, comprising 1646 acres of good agricultural land at the MACQUARIE PLAINS RAILWAY STATION, the present terminus of the GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from Henry M. Hutton, Esq., to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 31st January, at 11 o'clock, All that valuable agricultural estate, comprising 1646 acres, in the county of Hunter, adjoining MACQUARIE PLAINS RAILWAY STATION, and having extensive frontage to Fish River. The greater portion of the land is let for agricultural purposes to yearly tenants, and realises an income of £272 per annum. About 140 acres embracing the railway-station are laid out as a TOWNSHIP OF MILROSE. ☞ This superior country estate is well known. Its position at the TERMINUS of the GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY, the improvements on the property, the rich nature of the land for agricultural purposes, will sufficiently recommend it to the attention of capitalists. The Macquarie Plains Railway station is on the property, and it adjoins the estate of C. D. West, Esq. Plans at the Rooms. Terms at sale.

50 head of cattle
30 horses.

☞ The increase of lambs for the present year on the above station, numbering 2300, more or less, will be created as such, and not included in the purchase money.

The above station comprises 2 blocks of country, viz., HALLIFORD and STRETCHWORTH, which embrace an area of 160,000 acres of well-grassed, good wool-growing country, and is watered by a frontage of 17 miles in Wilkie's Creek and numerous other watercholes in the back country. Carrying capabilities of this valuable property are estimated at 20,000 sheep and 1000 head of cattle. HALLIFORD is in the inaccessible neighbourhood of those two (2) valuable properties so well known as St. Ruth's and Yandilla, and is distant only 30 miles from the township of Dalby, which is the railway terminus.

IMPROVEMENTS consist of large dwelling-house, new store, wool shed (70 x 15), paddocks of 160 and 100 acres each, and every other complete requisite for the efficient working of the station.

THE STOCK to be offered with the above important station has been for some years under the careful supervision of a practical manager, as a proof of which the Halliford clip of wool has always realised a high price in the Sydney market.

Horses, stores, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

G. F. WANT will offer the undermentioned valuable property, at his Rooms, Pastoral Exchange, 273, George-street, Sydney, by public auction, on TUESDAY, 7th January, 1873, at 11 o'clock prompt (under instructions from Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., to close partnership accounts),

Darling Downs District, Queensland.
7000 sheep
60 head of cattle
16 horses.

☞ The increase of lambs for the present year on the above station, numbering 2300, more or less, will be created as such, and not included in the purchase money.

The above valuable property, called Retreat, consists of the 5 following blocks of country, viz.:—

and are held under a 21 years' lease, from 1st July, 1869, from the Queensland Government.

The above-named blocks of country are permanently watered by the Weir River and five large creeks, which cover an area of 216,000 acres of thickly grassed country, with some salt bush and myall. Retreat is a good wool-growing property, and fattening is ordinarily fair seasons. The capabilities of the run may be fairly estimated at 20,000 sheep and 1000 head of cattle.

The IMPROVEMENTS at the head station consist of dwelling-house, shed, stores, and other buildings, including a paddock, 35 miles, together with other smaller outstations, yards, huts, &c.

Horses, stores, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

G. F. WANT will offer the undermentioned valuable property, at his Rooms, Pastoral Exchange, 273, George-street, Sydney, by public auction, on TUESDAY, 7th January, 1873, at 11 o'clock prompt (under instructions from Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., to close partnership accounts),

MOURA,
Leichhardt District, Queensland.
1500 head of cattle, more or less
60 horses.

The above well-known station, MOURA, is situated on the Dawson River, and is distant 120 miles south of Rockhampton, and consists of the following four (4) blocks of country, viz.,

MOURA

which embraces an area of 80,000 acres, held under a 21 years' lease from the Queensland Government. The fencing of the above run is very substantial and cattle-proof, enclosing over 20,000 acres of the best of the country, forming three large and three small paddocks, all well and permanently watered by the Dawson on one side, and large lagoons on the other.

With this extremely valuable station will be offered 1500 mixed cattle, more or less, to be mustered and delivered, and which will be found to be very superior to the generality of cattle, including, as it does, some good bulls but lately introduced into the herd.

The RUN, being so admirably watered and subdivided, is well adapted for a cattle station, and would carry easily 5000 head in all ordinary seasons; while its position, being in such close proximity to the rising township of Rockhampton, where numerous meat-preserving establishments are profitably worked, offers a certain and good market for fat stock, and makes it easy of access to buyers of store stock.

THE IMPROVEMENTS consist of good verandah 4-room house, office, dining-room, and extra bedrooms apart, kitchens and servants' rooms, store, fowl-house, harness room, coach-house, yards, and huts—all substantial, and enclosed by a strong fence.

Horses, stores, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

G. F. WANT will offer the undermentioned valuable property, at his Rooms, Pastoral Exchange, 273, George-street, Sydney, by public auction, on TUESDAY, 7th January, 1873, at 11 o'clock prompt (under instructions from Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., to close partnership accounts),

RAMS	250

☞ The increase of lambs for the present year on the above station, numbering 2068, more or less, will be delivered as such, and not included in the purchase money.

This favourite known pastoral property, situated as above, consists of 7 blocks of country, viz.:—

in all, 306 square miles, held under a 21 years' lease from the Queensland Government, from 1st July, 1869, which are well and permanently watered by the Boyne River through their entire length, besides numerous creeks and branches.

The country is all sound and well grassed, being adapted for either sheep or cattle. About 10 miles of excellent sheep and cattle fencing has been erected at a large outlay—the same being judiciously subdivided into paddocks. The sheep to be offered with the above run have been well attended to and carefully culled, being principally the progeny of selected sheep by rams lately purchased from the justly celebrated Collaroy flocks.

The Cattle are a mixed herd, quiet, and well bred, included in which are two PURE-BRED BULLS.

The IMPROVEMENTS, which are erected on 320 acres of purchased land, consist of good residence, good gardens, paddocks, woolshed, stock yards, store, washpool, &c., all of which are ample for the general working of the station, are well placed, and in good order.

Stores, horses, drays, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

G. F. WANT will offer the undermentioned valuable property, at his Rooms, Pastoral Exchange, 273, George-street, Sydney, by public auction, on TUESDAY, 11th February, 1873, at 11 o'clock (under instructions from Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co., to close partnership accounts),

WOMBO,
situated in the Darling Downs district, Queensland, consisting of the following blocks of country, viz.:—

WOMBO FOREST
YAMO.

The above station is close to the terminus of the Railway, in the township of Dalby, and will be offered without stock, including the right of brand to about 2000 head of cattle unmustered.

The IMPROVEMENTS consist of good houses, woolshed, and washpool.

The country, which could be formed into a first-class breeding run, would prove invaluable to the owners of overstocked Darling Downs runs, being magnificently watered and grassed in the dry seasons.

The carrying capabilities of the run are estimated at 10,000 head of cattle, and no less than 30 miles of good fencing has been erected, which forms a paddock capable of depasturing 1500 head of cattle all the year round.

To an energetic man, with a small capital, the above property would prove a most profitable investment.

Any further information may be obtained at the Pastoral Exchange, 273, George-street, Sydney.

G. F. WANT will offer the undermentioned valuable property
